The reduction will enable householders to buy the best steaks and roasts at the price levels prevailing in September and October last. A further reduction in beef prices will come into effect Sept. 13.

MILITARY EXPERTS SEE 2ND FRONT

BERNE, Switzerland (AP)—Foreign military specialists expressed a belief today the Allied raid on Dieppe proved a second front could be opened in France. Essential to its success, these sources said, would be sufficient superiority in land-based planes, adequate transport facilities, and a strong element of surprise. Published neutral descriptions of the recently completed German system of Channel fortifications indicated a full-scale Allied invasion effort would cost heavily, but would have a chance of advancing to the Meuse and Rhine provided the defenders could be out weighed in men and materials.

A correspondent for the Socialist newspaper La Sentinelle who recently visited some of the fortified sections said that even in the most exposed areas, the German defences along the coast of France, Belgium and Holland extend barely more than five to six kilometres in depth.

Red Bayonets Block Germans From Stalingrad

By HENRY C. CASSIDY

MOSCOW (AP)—German forces which crossed the Don River loop southeast of Kletskaya fought violently for a pathway to Stalingrad today, but field dispatches said strong Russian bayonet charges pinned down the vanguard and the complementary thrust from the southwest was hurled back by counterattacks.

Izvestia declared that almost all the Germans who sought to establish bridgeheads along the Don bend were exterminated, but two fresh Nazi divisions moved up.

This report from the government publication came as the army newspaper Red Star said approaches to the river were covered with the bodies of Germans, Italians, Hungarians and Rumanians, even while the crossing effort persisted.

German airmen supported the assault operations. Soviet air scouts discovered a large concentration of Italians in two settlements and Red Army ground troops were reported to have wiped out virtually all of them in surprise attacks with mortars.

The Axis dead totalled thousands, said the Communist newspaper Pravda. It reported 17 tanks led a charge into Red Army positions at one place, but six were destroyed and the others turned back.

Heavy Soviet artillery and Soviet tank crews co-operated to thwart a charge of 35 tanks upon the Russian lines in another sector during the critical battle of the Don bend.

Setbacks to the southern arm of the German pincers aimed at Stalingrad led to the assignment of new planes, tanks and reserve troops to that theatre above Kotelnikowski.

A dispatch to Izvestia said a great area was set aflame when German tanks hit a Soviet minefield. Soviet fighters swept up to shoot down many dive-bombers attacking Red Army lines, but other Nazi aircraft quickly took their place.

Five German columns of tanks and motorized infantry were reported moving behind aerial and artillery bombardments in the thrust up the railway line north-eastward toward Stalingrad.

Hitler launched his unsuccessful assault upon Leningrad a year ago today, besieging the former capital with 300,000 soldiers.

After 12 months, the city's defenders fight on. The Soviet Information bureau announced at noon that more than 1,000 Germans had been wiped out in 48 hours of local fighting on the Leningrad front and that Russian troops captured an important strategic position in a limited offensive.

"We destroyed 10 machine guns, three mortars and two ammunition dumps and seven enemy artillery batteries were silenced," the bureau said in summing up the latest developments of the struggle joined when the Germans struck Aug. 21, 1941.

Princess Margaret 12 Years Old Today

LONDON (CP)—Princess Margaret Rose, younger daughter of King George and Queen Elizabeth, marked her 12th birthday today at a Royal wartime home somewhere in the country. No special celebration was planned. It was expected, however, the Princess will hold a tea party for her playmates and receive gifts from her father and mother, her sister, Princess Elizabeth, and other members of the Royal Family.

Germans Report 2,095 Prisoners

BERLIN (From German Broadcasts, AP)—The German high command claimed today that 2,095 prisoners have been captured in the Dieppe attack. Of these, 617 were reported wounded.

Preliminary accounts the day after the fight had listed the number of prisoners at 1,500. A German communique claimed 117 British planes were shot down in the attack instead of 112 as originally reported. German plane losses were placed at 35 instead of the earlier-reported 37.

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Lieut. Percy Owen Lee, 23, of the Essex Scottish Regiment, is officially reported "missing," and believed killed in action, according to word received from Ottawa by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Percy W. Lee of London.

Brigadier Lett Wounded, But Safe

Brig. Sherwood Lett of Vancouver cabled his brother in Toronto today that he is "safe, wounded, not seriously," after the commando Joray against Dieppe Wednesday.

For the brigadier's brother, W. R. Lett of Toronto, the cable ended three days of suspense since it first was known that the B.C. officer had taken part in the raid.

He was believed to have been in charge of Canadian landing forces at Dieppe under Maj. Gen. J. H. Roberts.

Mr. Lett said his brother was too young for active service at the beginning of the first Great War but joined the Irish Fusiliers as a flute player and transferred to active service when he was 18.

In this war, Brig. Lett went overseas in the fall of 1940 as a brigade commander in the second division.

He was a major, wearing the military cross, when the first great war ended. In peacetime he rose to rank of colonel and was promoted brigadier when he went active as the commanding officer of the Irish Fusiliers at the beginning of this war.

Jury Frees Peters

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—Wesley Peters, 21, today was absolved in connection with death of Frank Hale, 66, by a coroner's jury. Jury found Hale died of a ruptured blood vessel caused by excitement and over-exertion, and not from a blow on the jaw. Police will ask the Attorney-General to withdraw manslaughter charge.

Heroism on Beaches of Dieppe Unsurpassed in Our Fighting History

By DOUGLAS AMARON
AT A CANADIAN ARMY HOSPITAL, SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND (CP)—Great-hearted Canadian soldiers, bearing their wounds with the same unflinching courage as that with which they faced the merciless hail of German bullets, unfolded today a story of heroism on the beaches of Dieppe unsurpassed in the Dominion's fighting history.

There is only one word to describe the valor of the men I talked with in the clean, airy wards of this newest Canadian hospital where they lay joking about scars they will always carry to remind them of the eight hours under fiendish German fire. The word is guts.

These were the less serious casualties—men sufficiently fit to be moved inland from coastal hospitals where the critically wounded were taken.

There was no need to ask many of them of their wounds. Weighted pulleys above the beds supported torn and shattered limbs. Blood-stained bandages revealed skulls had been creased and hands and feet sliced by shrapnel or pierced by bullets.

Pain was written on the faces of many of the men as they smoked and read or just lay still in their hospital cots. But they had a smile for all visitors, a wisecrack for many questions and a united resolve to return to their units and "knock Hell" out of the Germans.

Superb Heroism, No Boasting

None of these soldiers, some of them newly shaven but most with the black stubble of a week's beard, elaborated on or boasted of the part he played in the Battle of Dieppe, but a simple recital of facts was an account of superb heroism in itself.

One deed which stood out was described to me by a doctor at the hospital, who heard it from a wounded soldier—a French-Canadian member of Les Fusiliers, Mont Royal.

With other members of his platoon, the French-Canadian attacked a pillbox, wiping out 15 Germans. Then they stormed and took another pillbox, following this up with an assault on a German-manned trench.

By this time only the French-Canadian and two other soldiers were still alive, and as they advanced against another trench they, too, were hurled to the ground, badly wounded by a grenade thrown at their feet.

A German officer ordered them to stand, but they could not. The officer, revolver in hand, moved away for help, and as he turned the French-Canadian, supporting himself on the body of another Canadian, shot him dead.

Then this soldier crawled on his hands and knees to a boat at the beach.

Another story of courage under fire came from Pte. Henry Dingwall of Deloraine, Man., who smiled through a heavy growth of beard as he told how he "had to do it or else die."

Wounded in the hand early in the fighting, the 25-year-old member of the Camerons of Canada had his skull creased by a bullet which pierced his steel helmet as he helped shove a boat away from shore.

The German fire was too fierce to risk climbing into the boat, so Dingwall, despite his injured hand, and dazed from the blow on the head, swam a mile off shore to another boat and was hauled aboard by a rope.

"I figured I was a goner there," Dingwall said. "I was so tired I didn't think I could make it." Then, half apologetically, he explained he was unable to bring back all his equipment.

"I would sure like to have another crack at them once I get better," he added.

R.S.M. Roger Strumm of Saskatoon, who went ashore with the South Saskatchewan Regiment, returned with a souvenir he will cherish the rest of his life.

It is a steel mirror he carried in a pocket over his heart. A deep dent in the mirror made by a jagged piece of flying shell splinter is grim proof that the smallest protection can sometimes save a man's life.

Strumm, who went unwounded through the first Great War, said simply "I was lucky enough to get out this time."

He was wounded in the leg by shrapnel and was carried to safety by four soldiers who waded to their waists in order to place him in a boat.

Maj. F. S. Wilkinson, second-in-command of the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry, also was carried to a boat—by four German prisoners whom a junior officer rounded up.

The Hamilton major was wounded in the arm before he even landed but insisted on going ashore and for five hours remained with his unit, sheltering on the beach behind the frail protection of a Bren-gun carrier.

His war face as he lay bandaged and blood-stained arm raised above the covers told of the agony he must have suffered.

Pte. George McChesney, Hamilton, Ont., had a broken arm and he remarked on the youth of the prisoners.

"I was with one who was only 15 and he cried like a baby when I made him run across the open space to cover," he said.

The Canadians all spoke of heavy casualties and Pte. Charles Boomer of Brantford, Ont., a member of the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry, who was wounded in the leg half an hour before his unit left the French coast, said "I knew some of them wouldn't come back but I didn't think we would lose so many."

Canadians Victims Of Gestapo Trick

LONDON (CP)—The German gestapo was reported tonight to be making tangible plans to seek to convince Britain that the people of France will resist an Allied invasion.

Canadians returning from the Dieppe raid reported men believed to be Gestapo agents masquerading as French civilians pretending friendship with the raiding forces and then fired on them.

They said a number of Canadians were victims of these tactics.

Dieppe Ranked With Vimy In Canada's Battle Honors

LONDON (CP)—The gallantry of the Canadian commandos in the Dieppe action drew the praise of British newspapers today and the foremost tribute came from the London Star, which said: "Dieppe is a name that now stands with Vimy among Canada's treasured battle honors."

The tabloid Star devoted its entire editorial column to "Canada"—its fighting men and women; its factories and fields.

Provincial papers also were lavish with their tribute to the Dominion's rugged warriors.

"Canadians may rightly be filled with pride in the achievements of their fighting sons in this great raid," said the Star. "To them fell the distinction of playing the leading part."

"It was richly earned and gallantly performed by those hardy troops who had had to wait two years for this chance to strike a blow at the enemy. We may look upon it as a well-deserved gesture to that country whose part in the total war effort of the Empire has been truly enormous."

The paper reviewed Canada's manifold contributions and noted that the limit of her arms and supply production is "still far off."

"Hitherto Canada's sustained share in the fighting has been at sea and in the air," the Star added. "Her soldiers were fated to be at Hongkong but since the war began her sailors have battled unceasingly with convoys and her airmen have flown with the R.A.F. against the Axis in many fields."

Gen. Potts said, was a real leader. Sent from one of his own units to the Staff College at Camberley, and subsequently holding a staff post directly under him, the Vancouver man was specially picked to command the South Saskatchewan Regiment.

Many of the men in the latter unit were known to Gen. Potts, since he commanded them before the war as O.C. of a militia brigade in Saskatchewan.

Another officer well known to the Victoria G.O.C. was Lt. Col. A. Gotling of Winnipeg, who commanded the Cameron Highlanders of Canada, a regiment that took part in some of the thickest Dieppe fighting. Col. Gotling, Gen. Potts said, was another aggressive type of commanding officer with a tremendous capacity for work.

Gen. Potts said his own division in England, the 2nd, had been undergoing the stiffest type of training and that keen competition had spurred the efforts of the different units to get into condition for anything that might come.

Of Col. Cecil Merritt, former University School boy here, who was featured in dispatches on the Dieppe fighting, the general said:

They Did as Expected

"They did just the job I'd expect them to," said Maj. Gen. A. E. Potts, G.O.C., 6th Division, noted as the leader of the famed Spitzbergen raid, when asked today for his reaction to the Canadians' part in the commando raid on Dieppe Wednesday.

Gen. Potts, who commanded successfully a brigade and a division in England, returning here early this summer, knew many of the officers and men in the raid well.

"This was just the sort of thing they had been training for," he said. "They must have been looking forward to it and I'm sure they were thrilled at the chance of getting into action."

Allied Mastery Of the Skies Now Complete

LONDON (CP)—The clipped wings of the German air force in western Europe ranked today as the first big dividend of Dieppe.

Allied mastery of the air now is complete beyond challenge, not only over Britain and the channel but even deep into enemy territory itself.

This was proved by the extraordinary show of allied airpower Thursday, with virtually no opposition and apparently without loss of a single plane, over German-held soil.

In broad daylight, 500 fighters swept across the French coast—where never before had more than 300 planes made such a raid at one time.

NOT ONE NAZI

The R.C.A.F. in the forefront of the air duels over Dieppe on Wednesday, again took to the skies. Four squadrons escorted a force of Flying Fortresses, manned by members of the United States army air forces, to Amiens where the big four-engined bombers rained explosives on railway yards without even sighting a Nazi fighter over the target.

The Canadian squadrons were commanded by Sqdn. Ldrs. Keith Hodson of Ottawa, Norm Bretz of Toronto, Knobby Lee of Toronto and R. B. Newton, an Englishman.

One Nazi aircraft was shot down during the operation but it was not indicated whether it was destroyed by an escorting Canadian plane or a bomber.

The air triumph, generally regarded as the biggest of all the successes, was the outcome of an unplanned battle. Thus, in an R.A.F.-made crisis, British observers said, the Germans lost more than one-third of their operational aircraft in the west in one day and now must divert bombers and fighters from the Russian front.

Evidence that the Nazis were hit a staggering blow to their bomber strength as well as their fighter forces was the feeble counterpunch over Britain the last two nights.

The only appearance of hostile planes Thursday night was over the south coast, British authorities said, and only a few attacked, briefly, causing but slight damage. One was shot down.

CAUGHT NAPPING

An informed British air observer said the German air command was caught napping Wednesday and had to meet hundreds of R.A.F. fighters at first with 50 Messerschmitts "which were swept away like flies."

Later, he said, they called in every plane they could get from the Low Countries and put 400 into the air. Many of these, however, never were able to penetrate the allied air cordon and either were turned away or shot down.

'A TERRIFIC GUY' DESCRIBES MERRITT

Coolness under heavy fire of Col. Cecil Merritt of the South Saskatchewan Regiment, and formerly of Victoria, where he attended University School, during the attack on Dieppe was described in a radio talk Thursday night by Wallace Reyburn, Montreal Standard correspondent who, with Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, got ashore with the invading force.

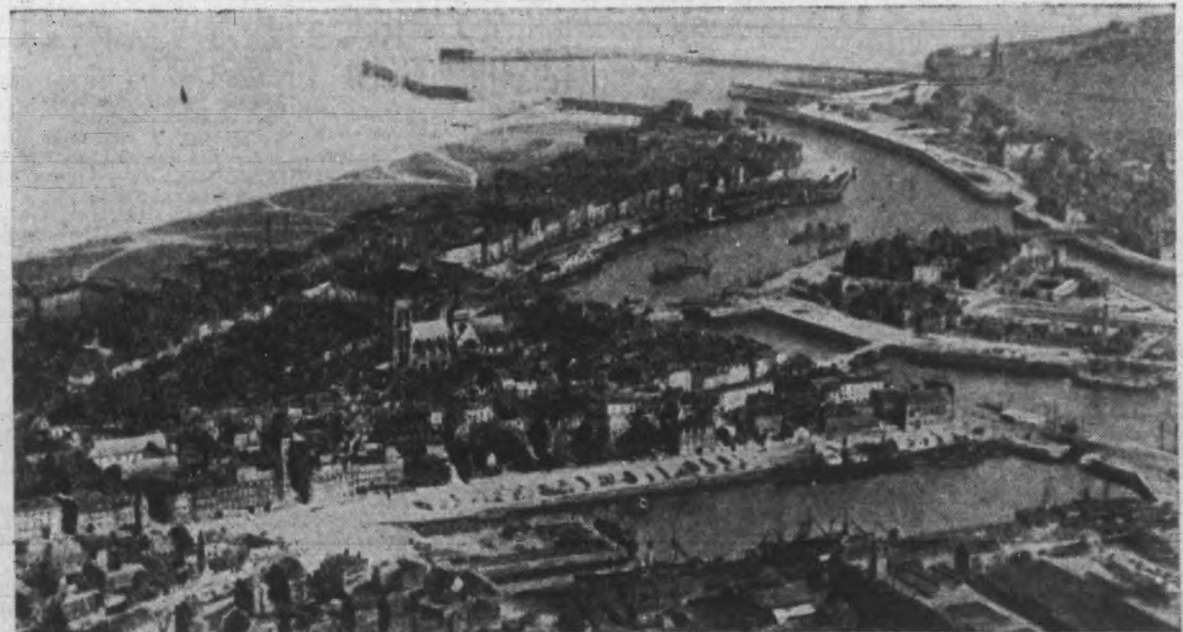

Reyburn described Col. Merritt as "a terrific guy" who "hails from Vancouver, where he used to be a lawyer."

"The best way to describe the sort of soldier Col. Merritt is would be for me to repeat what one of his officers remarked on the ship leaving England," Reyburn said. "To one of his fellows he said:

"You have to put a drag rope on the colonel to keep up with him."

The correspondent told how Col. Merritt at the battle scene shouted: "Come on men, we're going to cross this bridge—spread out! Don't bunch up. Here we go!"

And with that, said Reyburn, "he set off walking across the bridge, tin hat in hand, twirling it round as he walked—erect, not the least bit concerned by the muck that was flying around him."

Dominion to Pay Subsidy for Milk

OTTAWA (CP)—The Wartime Prices and Trade Board announced today the payment, effective Sept. 1, of a subsidy of 25 cents per 100 pounds to fluid milk producers in certain urban markets, including Victoria, "where the present supply position indicates serious shortage might develop during the fall and winter months."

At the same time, adjustments in the retail price of milk were announced for Vancouver, Halifax and Montreal.

In Vancouver, an increase from 10 to 11 cents a quart for 3.5 per cent milk, authorized some time ago, will go into effect Sept. 1. For Halifax and Montreal, an increase Sept. 1 of one-half cent per quart was announced by the board as necessary to completion of the reorganization of ceiling prices on fluid milk undertaken last spring. The present price in these cities is 12 cents a quart.

Concurrently, the board fixed minimum producer prices—on delivered basis—in all markets where the subsidy is payable. These specific prices represent an average increase of about 10 cents per 100 pounds, and the measures taken are designed by their combined effect to increase the returns of fluid milk producers by 35 cents. As result of this action, the board said, it is hoped to encourage milk production in the areas affected so supplies adequate to meet the demand may be maintained next winter and throughout the following season.

TAKE OTHER STEPS

If these measures are not successful, the board said, "other steps will have to be taken in areas of short supply to restrict less essential uses of milk and dairy products, assure an equitable distribution of existing production, and give precedence to the most essential consumer needs."

Among the markets in which the subsidy of 25 cents per 100 pounds of milk over the above minimum prices to producers will be payable are the following:

British Columbia—Ocean Falls, Prince George, Prince Rupert and Victoria.

The amount of the subsidy, it was explained, will be added to the price paid the producer by the milk distributor. The distributor will be reimbursed at the end of each month, for all subsidy payments upon completion of a form approved by the Commodity Prices Stabilization Corporation, Limited, and production of a certificate from the appropriate provincial milk control agency that the subsidy and the required minimum prices have been paid to the producer.

In each market, payment of the subsidy will be additional to and conditional upon payment by distributors of a specified minimum price to producers, or the present lawful price to producers, whichever may be the higher, on the basis of the appropriate provincial specifications for milk delivered at plant. In the absence of any provincial specification, the basis is to be 3.5 per cent butterfat for milk delivered at plant.

SET FLAT RATE

In markets where milk is purchased from producers by distributors at a flat rate, the specified minimum price will be determined in relation to the retail price of milk as follows: Where the maximum retail price is 11 cents per quart, the minimum producer price shall be $2.05 per 100 pounds; retail price 12 cents, minimum producer price $2.30; retail price 12½ cents, minimum producer price $2.45; retail price 13 cents, minimum producer price $2.60; retail price 14 cents, minimum producer price $2.90; retail price 15 cents, minimum producer price $3.15.

In markets where milk is purchased from producers by distributors on a two-price basis, with one price for a certain proportion or quota of milk and a secondary or surplus price for the remainder, the specified minimum price to producers will apply to quota milk. It will be determined in relation to the retail price of milk as follows: Where the maximum retail price of milk is 11 cents per quart, the minimum producer price shall be $2.10 per 100 pounds of milk; where retail price is 12 cents, the minimum producer price will be $2.35; retail price 12½ cents, minimum producer price $2.50; retail price 13 cents, minimum producer price $2.65; retail price 14 cents, minimum producer price $2.95; retail price 15 cents, minimum producer price $3.20.

Canada May Hope For Bigger Tea Ration

OTTAWA (CP)—They qualified their statement with two or three wartime "ifs," but informed sources say an increase in the tea ration of one ounce a week for each person over 12 years of age is something to which Canadians may look forward with a degree of optimism.

When the increase may come depends on the success of United Nations ships in traversing 8,000 miles of hazardous water from sources of supply in India and Ceylon, they said, but if supplies do reach Canada in some quantity, the courage and skill of Allied merchant seamen will be reflected in more frequent—and stronger—tea.

It was understood the one-ounce ration was a minimum, announced Aug. 2 after consideration of the stocks on hand and the shipping situation. Had the ration not been set low, stocks on hand would have been depleted rapidly without any certainty of their being replaced for a considerable time.

SPIN OUT SUPPLIES

"It was considered best to set the ration low to spin out supplies in sight as equitably as possible and make upward adjustments later if new arrivals made this possible," one official said.

"The rationing of tea could not be accomplished without the rationing of coffee, because the difficulty in obtaining the normal supplies of tea would have placed an intolerable burden on coffee stocks as buyers sought the more acceptable substitute.

"But while coffee has been obtained closer to home than the tea taken from India and Ceylon, its procurement is not without difficulty, and it does not follow that increases in the coffee ration are any more probable than those for tea."

When tea and coffee rationing was announced, the Wartime Prices and Trade Board said it was designed to guard against any failure of supply "during the next several months, when it is expected further supplies will be obtained from abroad."

Some sources of supply in the Netherlands East Indies and Malaya have been cut off by enemy occupation, while Ceylon and India are in a theatre of war. Before the war, Canada imported about 42,000,000 pounds of tea a year, and ships made the trip from the Orient in an average of six weeks. Now the voyage takes three or four months.

"If a ship carrying a tea cargo is lost, 1,000,000 pounds of tea—enough for 16,000,000 weekly rations—disappears," an official said.

SPACE TO SPARE

It was considered unlikely that in time of war, with urgent demand for products of India and neighboring nations required in munitions output, the full cargo space on any ship would be allocated to tea. But ships which carried war materials to this war zone for use against the Japanese sometimes had space to spare on the return voyage to the United Kingdom or the United States.

This space could be used for tea and, with the general United Nations' policy of dividing supplies as fairly as they could, Canada was expected to get her full share.

Major Canadian coffee supplies have come from South America, and enemy submarine activity in the Caribbean had hindered such shipments.

BRIG. C. MANN 2ND IN COMMAND

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND (CP)—Brig. Churchill Mann of Toronto was senior officer on Maj. Gen. J. H. Roberts' headquarters staff which planned and carried out the Dieppe raid.

He was general staff officer (first grade) of the force and had come from his senior appointment on another Canadian formation to go on the raid.

Maj. Peter Wright of Toronto was general staff officer (second grade).

Maj. John Hjalmarson of Winnipeg also was present.

All these officers returned safely to Britain.

During the operation Maj. Brian McCool of Toronto was principal beach officer on the main beach before Dieppe.

Lieut. Alex Hayes, former Scotland footballer, of the Essex Scottish, was aide-de-camp to Gen. Roberts.

Raid headquarters were established aboard a destroyer which sailed up and down the coast right under the nose of the Germans, with other warships, which constantly bombarded targets ashore.

Headquarters officers kept contact with the Canadian raiders after disembarkation by wireless and directed operations in that manner.

In addition to infantry units ashore at Dieppe there were Canadian sappers, who, like the others, suffered heavy casualties. They were a composite force drawn from various field companies and various parts of Canada.

It is not possible immediately to identify Royal Canadian Artillery gunners who took part as, like the Royal Canadian Engineers, they were a composite force.

Jugoslavian Patriots Wreck Express

LONDON (CP)—A fresh wave of sabotage by Yugoslav patriots was climaxed Saturday by wrecking the Zagreb-Belgrade express train, with 21 persons killed and 32 injured, Yugoslav sources reported today.

The German field commandant at Nis, named von Bothmer, offered rewards for arrests of persons who recently cut the Belgrade-Salonika railroad at three points, they said.

The report added that Serbian villages near the scene had been "severely punished" and two Bulgarian regiments were marching to the area north of Nis in search of Chetnik forces.

The Vichy radio said the wreck Saturday occurred 40 miles southeast of Zagreb.

Jugoslav sources in the Middle East said Croat guerrillas also had blocked rail traffic between Zagreb and the Italian border for two weeks.

A Reuters dispatch from Zurich quoted a Swiss correspondent in Berlin as saying 10 men had been shot in the eastern Croat town of Star Pasova for undisclosed reasons.

Other reports told of "revolts by communist elements and partisans" in eastern Slavonia during the first half of August in which German soldiers were attacked, food stocks burned and farm machinery destroyed. Yugoslav circles in Jerusalem reported fierce battles between Croats and Axis troops near the Slovenian towns of Gorenjsko and Rogas-kaslatina.

CHINESE CAPTURE JAP STRONGHOLD

CHUNGKING (AP)—An official Chinese military report today said Chinese forces had recaptured Kwangfeng, which the Japanese had developed into one of their most powerful strongholds in Kiangsi province.

It was stated the recapture had dispelled the threat of the first overland Japanese invasion of Fukien province.

The Chinese were said to have retaken the city Thursday morning after by-passing it in the Kiangsi campaign in which they have recaptured Kweld, Shang-jao and other points to wrest from the Japanese the control of a 60-mile stretch of the eastern Kiangsi railroad.

Cost-of-living Bonus Added to Pay Checks

OTTAWA (CP)—The cost-of-living bonus, the commando force of the anti-inflation war, will strike a stout blow for the ordinary man in thousands of pay envelopes being issued today and tomorrow, with thousands of Canadians receiving it for the first time.

Extra money is being provided for Canadian wage-earners because of a 2.4 per cent increase in the cost of living since last October. To men and women employees over 21 or earning more than $25 a week, the increased bonus amounts to 60 cents a week. To male employees under 21 and women employees making less than $25 a week, the increased bonus will amount to 2.4 per cent of their basic weekly wage.

The additional sums must be paid by employers starting on Aug. 15 and will therefore appear in the pay envelopes of those paid on the weekly basis either today or tomorrow. More than 1,000,000 Canadians receiving the cost of living bonus will benefit.

In addition, under federal regulations, employers who were not paying a cost of living bonus to the classes now entitled to it must start payment effective from the first payroll on or after Aug. 15.

Under the cost of living bonus order issued last October, those employers who were not paying the bonus were required to base their future payments, after Feb. 15, on an increase of a point or more over the October figure.

The Dominion bureau of statistics cost of living index stood at 117 at July 1, up 1.2 points from June 1.

The wartime wages order, under which the bonus is paid, covers all persons who earn less than $2,100 a year. Those earning from $2,100 to $3,000 a year also are covered if they are not above the rank of foreman or comparable rank. Those receiving $3,000 or more are excluded from the order unless it can be shown they are not above the rank of foreman.

Japanese Claims

TOKYO (From Japanese broadcasts, AP)—A Japanese communiqué reported today that some 200 American troops effected a landing at dawn Aug. 17 on Makin Island, at the northern tip of the Gilbert Islands. The communiqué claimed the troops were "repulsed completely."

(There was no allied confirmation of such a landing attempt.)

Battle of Dieppe

'Eyes' of Canada Troops Had Exciting Battles

By DOUGLAS AMARON WITH THE R.C.A.F., SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND (CP)—Cliff Horncastle and Charlie Stover do things in pairs in their Canadian Army Co-operation Squadron, but they were of different minds today as they told of the part they played in the Battle of Dieppe.

Cliff, a tall, smiling flying officer from Edmonton, thought luck had been against him. Charlie, a husky Sarnia, Ont., pilot officer, knew that lady luck had given him nothing but smiles.

With the rest of their flying mates, members of a squadron commanded by Sqdn. Ldr. Roy Begg of Vancouver, they sat around the mess after their combination breakfast-lunch and discussed the first real action of Canadian army troops against the Germans in this war.

And they were all in good spirits, for Flt. Lt. Freddy Clarke of Calgary, the only Canadian troop-pilot who didn't come home on schedule, has just wobbled in from a hospital with little more than a sore head and black eye to show for a crash landing in the sea.

'DANGEROUS'

Word went round to keep away from Horncastle, who was described as "temporarily a bad man to know—definitely a dangerous character." A scrap with a Focke-Wulf-190 that was first a cinch, then a flop, was to blame.

Horncastle didn't look dangerous as he sat at the table, dangled his legs over the side and grinned at a group of officers standing around him, all of whom apparently had been giving him quite a ride.

"I guess I was pretty sore for a while," Cliff explained. "But I'm feeling better now. After all Holly (F.O. Hollis Hill of Los Angeles) got a Jerry. But boy, it would have been nice to make it two."

Horncastle and Stover were flying together on one of the dawn-to-dusk flights members of this squadron made. They went out about 8 a.m. and were 25 miles inside France when, said Cliff, an FW-190 "jumped on us."

"He turned on me when he saw me coming," Cliff went on. "But somehow or other I got on his tail. I chased him for about five minutes and if it hadn't been for the guns he would have been a set-up."

But as luck would have it, only one of the guns of Horncastle's Mustang would fire. He, like a hawk without claws hovering over a small bird, was in position for the kill, but without means to carry it out.

"Boy, oh boy," Cliff concluded sorrowfully. "I sure am a disappointed guy."

Not Stover, however. About the time Horncastle was chasing the FW-190 four more of these newest Nazi fighters "jumped" at his partner from above.

Horncastle saw them coming, and shouted: "Quick! Get out of it" over the intercommunication phone to Charlie. Stover got out of it, diving to "nought" feet in the most evasive action of his life.

Island Miners Case at Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP)—The National War Labor Board will meet Aug. 31 to consider representations made here today by John Stokluk of Calgary, vice-president of the division of the United Mine Workers of America (C.I.O.) to which coal miners at Nanaimo and Cumberland, B.C. are affiliated.

Mr. Stokluk said he had explained to the board representatives the wage increase demands of the workers and answered the board's questions at a formal meeting today.

Meanwhile, Mr. Stokluk said, the 600 miners at Nanaimo and 700 at Cumberland will have to continue work. Otherwise their application to the National War Labor Board will not be considered.

At a meeting at Nanaimo Tuesday the coal miners voted to return to their jobs after a two-day walkout.

Countless Deeds of Valor As Canadians Storm Dieppe

By ROSS MUNRO
LONDON (CP)—Units of Canadian regiments, their ranks thinned in the costly action against the pebbled beaches and narrow streets of Dieppe, straggled back to camps in Britain today while Allied command chiefs studied the effect of the giant combined operation on the general United Nations attack plans.

Meanwhile, through Canadian army camps in Britain today stories of the heroism and courage of Canadians in the hellfire that was Dieppe on Wednesday were recounted by hardened men who now have been battle-tested.

There were countless deeds done on the shores of France and in the streets of Dieppe that never will be told. Too many did not return for a complete picture of the Canadians' individual heroic performances ever to be assembled.

At that, though, there are stories without number already. They tell of a wounded regimental sergeant major unable to walk who was carried waist-high into the sea and re-embarked by comrades who refused to leave him behind when the withdrawal was ordered.

His name was not immediately available on account of his being in the wounded category and casualties are still being tabulated, but he is married, 42, a typical western Canadian from Saskatchewan.

He landed on the beach with units of his regiment in the early morning of Wednesday's assault.

Shortly afterwards he received a shrapnel wound in the leg and as he could not walk he was carried by his battling comrades to a captured pillbox.

Seriously Wounded He Stays With Troops

There the soldier lay while the fortunes of war swayed across the pebble-dappled beaches and through Dieppe's narrow streets. He stayed until mid-afternoon when, their job done, his men came back for him.

Willing hands lifted him and then ducking, scrambling and taking advantage of anything offering even the most meagre cover, they carried him to the shoreline, out into the sea and placed him aboard the landing craft despite heavy enemy fire.

The official communiqué which said the Allied casualties were high termed the eight-to-nine hour sortie of Canadians with tanks and all the weapons of assault a "reconnaissance in force." It said the raid which resulted in the destruction of 91 German aircraft and the probable destruction or damage of double that number had a "vital part in our agreed offensive policy."

Two gun batteries and a radio location station were destroyed, two small vessels were sunk, heavy casualties were inflicted on the Germans and numerous prisoners were captured.

It was important in that, among other things, it demonstrated successfully the theory of co-ordination between the three services—sea, air and land.

Nazi Air Losses May Aid Russia

It was believed to have cost the Germans a third of their effective air strength on the western front, a circumstance that may force them to divert bombers and fighters from the Russian front where they were exerting their most powerful effort.

There were no actual figures on Canadian losses in killed and wounded, but the Germans claimed they had taken 1,500 prisoners. Ninety-eight Allied aircraft were lost, but 30 pilots were saved.

Many of the prisoners would probably be Canadians, since these men, under the command of Maj.-Gen. J. H. Roberts of Kingston, Ont., formed a large proportion of the raiding force. It also contained a smattering of American Rangers along for an instructional ride, a few fighting French commandos and a good number of British commandos.

Units of six Canadian infantry battalions and a tank regiment carried out the major attack on the French coast.

The Royal Hamilton Regiment and the Essex Scottish of Windsor, Ont., with the Calgary Tank Regiment, carried the main attack right into Dieppe itself; men of the South Saskatchewan Regiment and the Cameron Highlanders of Winnipeg landed at nearby Pourville in a flanking movement; while the Royal Regiment from Toronto went in at Puits, one mile east of Dieppe. The Fusiliers de Mont Royal were floating reserves who were rushed ashore at Dieppe to help their comrades.

In addition to these formations there was a detachment of Toronto Scottish machine gunners who manned Vickers guns set up on the assault boats and on the principal beaches for anti-aircraft work.

There was a detachment of the Black Watch from Montreal which operated with the Royal Regiment in the landing at Puits.

Artillery Officers Liaison With Navy

Officers of the Royal Canadian Artillery and a number of non-commissioned officers were with the assault troops to co-ordinate naval bombardment with army operations ashore.

With a fleet of destroyers lying within a mile of the French coast—right under the German noses—throughout the operation, naval guns were used extensively for smashing up opposition, that the infantry could not cope with. One destroyer, the Berkeley, was so badly damaged by enemy attack that she had to be sunk. The majority of her crew were saved.

Artillery officers—in this case called "forward observation officers"—advised formation commanders about possible naval fire and told them whether targets were suitable for their shells.

They sent wireless messages to offshore destroyers when they needed the aid of guns.

An elaborate system of combined operations wireless communications was used by the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals on the raid.

The force headquarters remained at sea aboard destroyers and Gen. Roberts directed the battle by wireless through various signal networks which reached all over the Dieppe area.

The work of the British commando troops was highly praised by the returning Canadians.

The British outfit, commanded by Lord Lovat, wiped out 150 Germans when it destroyed a German gun position at Varengeville, west of Dieppe.

Another commando went in to attack another gun post at Berneval, east of Dieppe, but its ships got angled up in an accidental naval scrap with some German flak boats.

The force had to disperse, but one young commando officer and a naval officer in one of the units of 20 landing craft decided to land according to plan.

With a handful of his troops he went ashore and located the Berneval battery. With the force at his disposal he could not attack the battery, but he and his men hid near its position and sniped at it.

Sniping Harasses German Battery

This had the desired effect, for the sniping so harassed the gun crews that the guns did not fire throughout the raid despite the fact they were ranged on the Dieppe beach.

A special detachment of the Royal Canadian Engineers was trained for the raid and developed demolition equipment with explosives for use in the particular task assigned to them in helping to destroy Dieppe installations.

The R.C.E. landed on the main beach with the Essex and Hamilton men. They blew up wire obstacles which blocked the infantry, checked the promenade for mine fields and then helped the tanks get through road blocks at street entrances.

There were many cases of valor. There were the men of the Royals with whom I rode who were turned back from the beach by withering fire from the cliffs.

I left them and transferred twice to other assault boats and heard later that they had regrouped, gone ashore and knocked off the opposition which prevented them from landing at the first attempt. They had been badly cut up in that attempt, too, being under fierce fire for 20 minutes.

There were the Fusiliers, whose task was to blast German boats in a pool in town. It was a mile from the beach and was called the "Basin du Canard." The survivors, who blew up everything they could, renamed it the "Basin du Canada."

Twelve of them started for the job, but only four arrived. After they had done their task they bumped into eight other French-Canadians but were promptly surrounded and captured.

They had seen the Germans take a dozen of their comrades prisoners and shoot them in the back.

They were luckier. Their captors merely stripped them of their clothing, down to their underpants and took their boots from them, then left them in charge of one young German soldier who stood behind them with a rifle.

Nazi Guard Victim Of Canadian's Wit

One big French-Canadian got an idea. In broken English he asked the Nazi if he could speak English.

The German said he could a little and the Canadian asked: "How about a glass of water?"

The Nazi was not as tough as the rest. The question got him for a second. He lowered his rifle and promptly found himself at the bottom of a heap of a dozen half-naked men.

One of them found a length of pipe and knocked the Nazi's brains out.

Then they ran for it through streets piled with dead Germans and swarming with lively ones.

They made the cliff-top and hid among boulders there until the re-embark order came and brought them a smoke screen through which they slid to the beach.

As they ran across the shingle to the boats which had come in from their offshore station the big man who had the idea that saved them all stumbled on a wounded officer. He slung him over his shoulder and took him aboard.

They were all still in their underpants and barefooted. They arrived in port in a strange assortment of togs, sweaters, tankmen's berets and naval uniforms borrowed from the sailors who took them off.

Their outfit is believed to have lost a lot of men, but their casualties were not announced as some may have escaped by some means.

The Canadians carried with them handbills and posters advising the French population of Dieppe not to try to help them because this was not an invasion—only a visit.

"Frenchmen," the text read, "this is a surprise stroke, not an invasion. We strongly urge you to take no part and to do nothing that might invite reprisals by the enemy."

Mackenzie King Thanks Soldiers

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King Thursday cabled Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, commander-in-chief of the Canadian army overseas, that the people of Canada shared with the Canadian troops raiding Dieppe "the satisfaction of their opportunity to strike a telling blow at a Nazi stronghold."

"All Canada has been deeply stirred by the account of yesterday's raid on Dieppe," said Mr. King, adding that "we were proud to learn that Canadian troops had been given a foremost place in the operation."

Canadian hearts are "filled with sympathy" for the families of those who fell in action and for the wounded and missing, he said. "Their sacrifice has strengthened the country's determination to give the utmost support to our fighting men on land, at sea and in the air."

He asked Gen. McNaughton to convey to the officers and men taking part in the raid "the expression of our deep admiration of their memorable exploit."

In 1940 the United States sent canned salmon to every country in the world, with exports totaling 60,207,765 pounds.

Letters to Editor

Correspondents are reminded that one side of the paper only, to write legibly, and to keep their communications within a reasonable length. A short letter, with a point convincingly emphasized, has a better chance of publication than one with labored platitudes.

THE LADY OF THE LAKE

Mrs. Ashe ought to know that abuse is no answer to my question, how under Socialism can "factories, lands, railways, etc." be taken over and used by society as a whole? Unless they are controlled by the state, and how can "goods be distributed" without money which represents the right to such goods?

Mr. Page similarly evades the question. Even Trotsky admitted that "Russia is a workers' state because it has nationalized the industries and instituted state planning." Mrs. Strong states "The mighty stimulus to the Soviet people's courageous fighting is the public ownership of all the vast resources of one-sixth of the world. The Soviet people are defending their property. The natural resources, the mines, powerplants, factories of the whole U.S.S.R. are the joint property around which the joint owners rally as one united fist. Joint ownership of the nation's resources is no romantic slogan. In very concrete ways each Soviet citizen knows that he shares the national wealth."

Article 6 of the constitution makes all these sources of wealth "state property, that is, the wealth of the whole people." But Mrs. Ashe denies this and avers that the workers' "position is no different from that of workers in other capitalist countries"; and by this misuse of the word "other" begs the question with total lack of logic.

Because I confuted Mr. Page's false insinuation that I had not studied economics by a brief recital of facts to the contrary, Mrs. Ashe accuses me of "eulogizing my own merits" and claiming to be "infallible." I have never made any such claim and there is no more "merit" in studying economics than there is in studying chess. What could be more unfair than to abuse a man, who has been slandered, for exposing the untruths and then edness and good sense. When the hour strikes we will notify you. And then will we act side by side for our common victory and your liberty."

Returning Canadians said the warning worked, except in a few isolated instances.

make, as Mrs. Ashe does, a similar false charge viz.—that I evidently have not read works on sociology" which she declines to "enumerate?"

How does she know, unless she is both "infallible" and omniscient, what books I have or have not read, and how can anyone prove that he has read unspecified books? In fact, my note books prove that I have read many "works on sociology," including those of the youthful Communist, Sidney Hook (the only writer she cites who mentions Russia), and also the crushing disproof of his contentions by Max Eastman and other leading critics. Her further charge that I study only one side of the question is therefore untrue.

Usage settled the meaning of the term "socialism" long before Hook was born, and usage is proved by reference to dictionaries and encyclopedias. I consulted four dictionaries (Oxford, Standard, Century, Webster) and six encyclopedias (Britannica, American, New International, New Popular, Johnson's, Nelson's) and found that they all contradicted Mr. Page, as do Marx, Engels, Stalin, Trotsky, Henderson and Sloan. That verdict on a simple question of fact constitutes "irrefutable authority" as to what "socialism" means.

The "Lake School" (Page and Co.), as Mr. Toynbee proved by his quotation from Stalin, substitute the term "socialism" for "communism" and "state capitalism" for "socialism," but this trickery is exposed by asking them "what then is communism?" They cannot reply without admitting that "communism" is the thing they describe as "socialism." Their contention, therefore, in plain English is, "apart from communism there is no socialism but only capitalism," but they lack the candor and courage to admit this since it is a transparent untruth.

Salute to Leningrad

ONE YEAR AGO TODAY LENINGRAD faced virtual encirclement and the world was hourly expecting the capitulation of its defenders. After two months of unparalleled Nazi successes the enemy seemed ready for the kill. More than 300,000 of Hitler's soldiery, 1,600 tanks, and 1,000 planes had been assigned to reduce the old Russian capital to submission. The prospect was about as gloomy as it could be. But the Wehrmacht had not counted on the effect such an hour of great peril could have on a people who were battling for everything they held dear—their lives, their homes, and their native land. And now, 12 months later, Leningrad and its defenders know that only a great calamity elsewhere on the elongated battlefield could weaken their capacity and determination gradually to push the Nazi hordes back from whence they came.

Down in the southeastern region of the Russo-German front matters are not going well for our gallant allies. But for every mile it advances the Wehrmacht is paying a terrible price. The old German high command urgently needs will not flow from the devastated Malskop area for many, many months. Russian engineers have seen to that. True enough, Russia will feel the pinch, too, because the loss of this territory must affect her war and domestic economy. And it may be that the continued advance of the enemy into the north Caucasus will see the torch applied to Grozny's important oil fields—perhaps supplies from the greatest source of all at Baku will be cut off.

In the meantime, however, Leningrad stands firm on the first anniversary of its siege. And it is beginning to be clear that in other sections of the central front and in the areas many leagues below Moscow the Red Army is improving its position and making the invaders pay dearly for every fruitless offensive effort. Thus it is not wishful thinking to suggest that sooner or later the enormous cost in men and machines the Wehrmacht is sustaining in the southern sectors may bring about a change in our ally's fortunes that will permit new Russian counterattacks from Voronezh northward. Nor is it likely that Premier Stalin has omitted to stock up with large oil reserves in anticipation of this serious curtailment from his main source of supply. Certain it is that the Soviet Union's losses in this regard do not mean a commensurate gain for the Nazis. And there is a striking absence of German predictions of complete victory over the Russians before the snow flies!

The P.G.E.

TIME WAS WHEN BRITISH COLUMBIANS were wont to speak derisively of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway. Cartoonists found it excellent "copy." The public generally alluded to it as this province's snow-white pachyderm. It became the bane of successive governments. Through it all, however, good management has converted it into an asset of important potentialities. Premier Hart's recent successful refunding operations, moreover, drew much attention from far and near to his own financial perspicacity in particular and to his coalition administration in general. And the system now is being viewed as a piece of property with a bright future. What form that future will take, of course, is on the knees of the gods. But it is gratifying to know that developments now unfolding have much promise, not only for the taxpayers of British Columbia, but also for the part the railway and its possible extensions may play in the war and post-war economy of the province.

Farley Got His Man

ROOSEVELT VERSUS FARLEY WAS the real battle at yesterday's convention to choose a Democratic standard-bearer for the office of Governor of the State of New York. The President had "put his money" on New Deal Senator James M. Mead. Former Democratic National Chairman James A. Farley had energetically "backed" State Attorney-General John J. Bennett Jr. To the latter went the nomination; and thereby hangs a tale.

Mr. Roosevelt did not think Mr. Bennett was the man to beat former "trust-buster" Tom Dewey; the chief executive wanted the strongest possible man for this important fight. Mead seemed to fill the bill. But Mr. Farley still thought otherwise; and when he learned of the President's decision he cited nine occasions on which Mead had said he did not want the job, that he was not looking for it, and that he would make a "terrible" governor. Feeling sure of himself under the patronage of "the chief," however, the Senator replied that "under no circumstances will I engage in a campaign of vituperation." In any case, the presidential plump for the Senator meant that the battle was on between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Farley.

It will be recalled that when Mr. Roosevelt chose to seek a third term in the summer of 1940, his old friend and political colleague did not like the idea at all—and Mr. Farley made the fact quite plain to the President. They agreed to differ on the point; Mr. Roosevelt stuck to his guns, got his wish, and won the day in the following November. Mr. Farley, of course, has not changed his faith; but relations between the two have remained somewhat strained ever since. It has been argued, nevertheless, that if Senator Mead had captured the nomination yesterday, he would have been assured of the support and co-operation of former Postmaster-General Farley in the forthcoming election, a consideration which now has no meaning.

Yesterday's decision must be disappointing to Mr. Roosevelt on another score. At one time it looked as if Mr. Wendell L. Willkie would find himself compelled to succumb to the "draft-Willkie-for-governor" movement which a group of the more progressive Republican elements launched early in June. Neither they nor the unsuccessful candidate in the 1940 presidential election desired the nomination of Mr. Dewey. But when Mr. Willkie removed himself from the running in the gubernatorial contest, the President was automatically relieved of any obligation to campaign—directly or indirectly—against his opponent of two years ago, with whom, of course, he has been on cordial and almost intimate terms for considerably more than a year.

Had Senator Mead obtained the nomination for the governorship, moreover, all would have been well. How Mr. Roosevelt will take his rebuff is another matter again. Will he heal the breach between himself and Mr. Farley? Or, to paraphrase Mr. Willkie's "he's-my-President-now" declaration, will the chief executive say that State Attorney-General Bennett is "my candidate now?" What is clear above all else is that the 94 New York delegates to the 1944 Democratic Convention will go under the wing of Bennett's sponsor.

What Next?

WRITING IN HIS SYNDICATED COMMENTARY on the moving scene of these times, Mr. S. Burton Heath tells the story of one Don Mario, the singing band leader of Providence, Rhode Island—the man who was fined $500 for joining a Fourth of July gathering in singing "The Star Spangled Banner." It appears that the Providence Citizens Sunday Recreation Committee sponsored three park entertainments on July 5, and paid union rates for professional bands to provide the music.

Don Mario's orchestra, at that time playing at a night club, offered to give its services—as an added feature, not to displace the paid union musicians. The Providence local of the American Federation of Musicians refused permission, and suggested that Mario himself should sneak out of town for the day rather than go to any of the affairs. Instead, Mario accepted membership in the official party which consisted of the mayor, the actress Sylvia Sydney, and four others. When the paid union band played "The Star Spangled Banner," everybody began singing. Mario, standing between the mayor and Miss Sydney, joined in. On Aug. 10 he was notified "fraternally" of the $500 fine by the executive board, which held that by singing the national anthem he had made a personal appearance forbidden by his union. Mario was ordered to pay the fine by Sept. 5. Otherwise he can be suspended from union membership and deprived of the means of livelihood.

It should be understood that the International union is headed by James Caesar Petrillo, who has forbidden the making of musical records or transcriptions; who is facing federal anti-trust action; whose New York local forbade the soldier band of "This Is the Army" to play at the opening of a service men's social centre. In our neighbor's old-fashioned, horse-and-buggy, ruggedly individualistic way she naturally resents the situation in which a private organization can fine any man $500 for singing the national anthem in public or private, free or for pay, in wartime or in peace. She thinks it is un-American. So will most people.

They Just Went to Work

THE MONTREAL STAR PRINTS A story from Washington that might well have an application elsewhere.

When President Roosevelt drafted Bernard Baruch, President Conant of Harvard and President Compton of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology as a supreme committee of three to handle the rubber crisis, these men did not wait to engage a staff, organize a secretariat, hunt up office space and open a publicity department. Hatless and coatless, they went to work at once on a park bench in Washington. They were hard at it before even the alert newspaper corps at the Capitol suspected they were in action.

With Japan in possession of most of the sources from which their country drew its rubber, and with the war demands for rubber growing hourly, these men made the right kind of a start. Setting an example to the new government bureaus springing up on all sides, and putting a premium on office space, they just went to work.

Notes

"I had a wonderful dream last night," remarked the Tokyo communique writer, slipping a sheet into his typewriter. "Now to make it official."

It must be remembered that freeing India would destroy one of the key industries of that tumultuous land; namely, the movement for a free India.

Post-war planners will bear in mind that hell hath no fury like a taxpayer snapping out of a long trance. That is how the American republic got started.

NEIGHBORLY MESSAGE

THIS IS JUST a personal message from me to the lady who stole all my raspberries: "Dear Madam: I am very glad to find you stole my raspberries, for I had supposed that a worse disaster had befallen them. I had imagined they were diseased and dying, since they yielded no fruit. Now, having discovered you, I realize that they produced an abundant crop which you carefully picked and preserved; and the thought of the dozens of bottles of jam glistening in your cupboard next winter is compensation enough for me who pruned, sprayed, cultivated and watered the raspberry canes for 12 months, awaiting the crop."

"And I know you took them with the best intentions in the world, imagining that I did not want them, supposing they would go to waste; nay, you picked them out of pure patriotism, at great sacrifice of time and trouble. I deeply appreciate the favor, only next year I do wish you would leave me just a few so that I may sample them for myself and see that my old cunning as a horticulturist has not entirely disappeared."

"And I send this message to the man who has been stealing all my early apples: "Dear Sir: It was kind of you to relieve my over-burdened trees from the heavy weight of their crop. You were moved, no doubt, by pity for them and acted in protest against an owner who had failed to prop them up with sticks. You have done me a great service and I appreciate it. But I think you have expended enough of your time and energy already. I think you may let the rest of the apples remain on the trees without endangering them."

"The fact that your name and address is well known to me and that I have advised the police and my neighbors of the facts should not be regarded by you as offensive or unneighborly. I have taken these steps purely as a matter of form. I do not expect a little thing like that to prevent you pursuing your work to the end, for a lover of nature like you will not rest until the trees are entirely free and unburdened again. And if, as I hear, you have suffered seriously from indigestion, wait a little while. The apples will be ripe in a fortnight and you can have them just as easily then. And if you hear a shotgun exploding nearby while you are engaged in your neighborly work do not be alarmed. That will just be me having my little joke."

SOCIALIST PROTEST

A GENTLEMAN writes to this newspaper to protest that in our current economic scheme no attention is paid to the man who is living on the results of his savings, even though those savings represent years of labor in his younger days. Now this will seem a dangerous notion in our time—the notion that a man has any right to enjoy his savings and his former labor. However, the protest comes from a gentleman who, I have always understood, is a Socialist, so that it cannot be attributed merely to the aversion of great wealth.

But this gentleman need expect no sympathy from our generation. The prevailing theory of society today is that while a man's wages should be protected because he is a worker, there is no particular reason to protect the interest on his investments, even though he has saved his capital from the sweat of his brow. The actual fact of saving is the objectionable thing now-a-days. Indeed, you might say that our newly-developing economic system is largely based on the assumption that if a man owns a bond, mortgage or stock he must be an enemy of society. The common assumption goes further and holds that any man who has a dollar more than he has must be a crook and certainly should be brought down to his level.

All these theories and assumptions may be sound and may be acted upon for all I know. But there is a certain irony in the fact that they are propagated largely by Socialists and that a Socialist has to protest against them.

HONEST PARTY

SPEAKING OF WHICH, the C.C.F. has finally demonstrated that it is an out-and-out Socialist Party. Of course, it has been so in theory from the beginning, but most people in this part of the world at any rate have not realized that fact. They have generally assumed, in a vague sort of way, that the C.C.F. was a mild protest or reform party. However, by solemn vote in the House of Commons, the C.C.F. refused to support overseas conscription unless it were accompanied by conscription of wealth and the socialization of war industries. "War Industries" include so much of our whole economy that C.C.F. vote meant, in fact, a general program of Socialism.

Now the C.C.F. has been vigorously attacked for this vote against conscription as if it were dishonest. On the contrary, it is wholly honest, perhaps too honest for its own good. It will make no compromise with its principles. It is for a totally Socialist state in Canada and will not hide this fact or seek office on any other policy. The choice thus is clear to all for the first time. If you want total Socialism, vote for the C.C.F. but not otherwise. And rejoice that one political party at last knows what it wants and where it is going.

Parallel Thoughts

'Mrs. Jones Will Have to Change'

By HELEN E. BOTT

I am a housewife with a family of children, and a husband overseas. I have been trying to bring my housekeeping into line with government requirements, and to pioneer a new kind of homemaking which will make our home a true part of the national war effort.

We are exploring a way of living that is geared to present needs and anticipates more drastic demands in the future. It means hard thinking—about total war on the home front and how we must all change and reshape our lives to make total victory possible.

Wherever my thoughts turn I find myself up against the mythical Mrs. Jones—you know, the one we have all kept up with these many years. Mrs. Jones has set our standards of living for too long. They have been standards of getting as much as we could for ourselves, standards of material rather than spiritual progress, standards of comparison with one another rather than absolute values.

This is woman's hour, when for the first time we are being asked to expand our personal skills into housekeeping for the nation. We hear that this is a war of production, but it is equally a consumer's war. This is where women come in. Production and consumption are of equal importance and must run on parallel lines, though in opposite directions. As war production increases, civilian consumption must decrease. That is a commonplace of war economy. Otherwise there is a head-on collision and—crash goes our war effort.

There are no problems in production which are not people's, says Gordon England, in charge of the manufacture of the famous "Spittfires" in Great Britain. "People are the fundamental factor in every industrial situation." We hear a lot about the "human factor" in industry—just plain "people" to Mr. England—and about personal relations as the bottleneck in production. Are they also the bottleneck on the consumers' front?

It looks as though fixing prices will only work if we fix people. It can succeed only if we women, who buy 80 per cent of all consumer goods, have what it takes to make it work. Government regulations can't do it. Nothing but the good will and determination of countless unknown housewives all over the country making, small, unnoticed sacrifices can accomplish what is an urgent national necessity.

This means rooting out fear and greed, the two motives which can defeat the consumer plan. Fear, because hoarding is a symptom of fear—fear that we may lose what we possess or have to do without at some future day. Greed, because we want things for ourselves and try to snatch more than we need. If greed goes out, waste will go too—for waste is the backfire of extravagance.

Mrs. Jones will have to change if she is to continue to set the fashion for us. The old Mrs. Jones will feel cramped and frustrated if you talk to her about a lower standard of living, for things have always been her gods. The new Mrs. Jones can learn that she is being asked for more imagination, skill, ingenuity and responsibility than ever before.

Then it will be possible to lower our material standards of living and, at the same time, raise our standards of life. It means that instead of putting ourselves first we are going to learn to think and act for our country. This is the real meaning of patriotism.

BECOMING ALARMED

From Financial Post
Although officially pooh-poohed at the beginning, Washington is reported to be getting more concerned with Japanese activities in the Aleutians, most western outpost of the North American continent. Early official announcements gave the impression that merely a few Japs had landed on some rocky islet and would soon starve. The fact they are still there after serious efforts to dislodge them is beginning to cause misgivings now. Incidentally, according to the Whaley Eaton Service of Washington, the general American

NEW USE FOR SAWDUST

From Canadian Lumberman
Sawdust has been growing more popular for furnace heating in the Maritime provinces each year, but a new use is now reported from Harborville, N.S., for the sawmill refuse. With one of his tires beyond repair, a motorist, with his car his sole means of transportation to and from work, filled the several holes in ailing tire with sawdust and then cemented over the affected spots. He reveals that the sawdust-loaded-tire is standing up to the daily run. This is believed to be the first time sawdust has replaced air in tires anywhere in the world, although wooden tires have made appearances at some spots.

Individual Effort Essential to Make Democracy Work

VANCOUVER—Only individual effort will make democracy work, maintained Dr. Margery Fry, outstanding British educator and authority on penal reform, when speaking at the Wednesday luncheon meeting of the Women's School for Citizenship at the Devonshire Hotel.

After the war, a much truer democracy will prevail, and the rights which the British loaned to the government for the duration, just as money has been loaned, will be expected back with interest when the present struggle is over, she said.

"It is so easy to criticize the government as a distant and tyrannical 'they,'" Dr. Fry said. "It is only when we begin to think of it as 'we' that democracy really has a chance to work." She spoke of the same and stolid balance wheel of the British Civil Service, which plods along impartially and unchanged as various political parties come and go.

"But the civil service is one of the mainstays of democracy which prevents the abuse of power through patronage in party government," Dr. Fry sketched the lack of a stable nonparty civil service in France as one of the reasons for its disintegration. "In the lively discussion that followed Dr. Fry's address, Miss Margaret Owen asked the speaker whether she could honestly say that women make good sound parliamentarians. "Do men?" retorted Dr. Fry, amid noisy approval.

Asked by Mrs. Grace MacInnis, M.L.A. whether she could see any solution to the Indian problem, Dr. Fry said that before the war she had belonged to a little group in England which was determined to work for the liberation of India. "We organized and thought and discussed, and in the end after sincere application to the cause, we had to admit that there was no policy for freeing India that we could agitate for that would be acceptable to the Indians themselves," she said.

PEOPLES EFFORT

Dr. Fry's creed is that the people themselves are the ones who must make a democracy work . . . by study, by interest, by agitation, by striving. When she spoke of the tremendous contribution in sacrifice and fighting effort made by China and Russia, she was asked whether Britain's stand (while she stood alone) had not made the present Russian effort possible.

"I would be a poor Briton if I did not admit that," Dr. Fry said. "And in two things at any rate Winston Churchill showed himself a great leader. He made Britain hold out in the terrible months after the downfall of France, and he announced alignment with Russia without hesitation, within 24 hours of the German invasion of that country."

Mrs. Laura Jamieson, M.L.A., in thanking the speaker, stressed her own appreciation of Dr. Fry's belief of the workability of democracy, through the earnest application and personal responsibility of the peoples who go to make it up.

Air Marshal and Out

Canada Club's Gift

English Guides Grateful to Local Girls for Gifts

Last winter an English Guider in writing to a friend in Canada mentioned that it is now practically impossible for English Guides to get uniforms, since it requires the expenditure of precious clothing coupons. The Victoria Guides decided to collect a few uniforms and send them to England and the following letter has just arrived acknowledging the parcel:

Watton-at-Stone, Herts, England—"Your two parcels have arrived quite safely and are such a thrill. I cannot tell you how grateful we are, not only for the uniforms themselves, but for the kind thought and the trouble you have taken to think out the contents of the parcels. It was a real treasure hunt. I am afraid in this small island we get very self-centred, and it is difficult to make the Dominions at all real, but the kirby grips and chocolate do it quicker than anything.

BUTTONS AS PRIZES

"I have just had to give up a company in Hertford which I have had since 1919. It is now amalgamated with the 2nd Hertford, so I propose to give them each an overall, together with the 'treasure hunt' to be competed for. The Guider's uniform I am keeping at the moment, and the spare buttons we proposed using for patrol prizes for some of the extension companies.

"We certainly have had difficulties to contend with—black out, no halls to meet in, etc., and now coupons for uniform, but difficulties are made to be overcome and I hope you will overcome them even better than we have, and that you will never have to experience a blitz. Let us hope the war is soon over and we can all visit each other again. Very best wishes to all the south Vancouver Island Guides and again many thanks."

Britain Appoints Woman to Council For Production

By ALAN RANDAL

LONDON (CP)—The government, calling more and more women into war industry, have taken steps to see that women's problems are properly looked after in the appointment of Mrs. Dorothy Martin to the Industrial Production Panel.

She is a Scotswoman, a 48-year-old member of the Institute of Automobile Engineers. Mrs. Martin is described in the London press as "The Woman Who Understands Women."

When drafted for her new job she was supervisor of female labor for the Nuffield factories in Birmingham and during the last year was woman supervisor of Vickers where she had charge of 7,000 women. Between the First Great War and this one Mrs. Martin found time to raise a daughter, who is now 15, and to put in 12 years at running a laundry and five years as managing director of a motor firm in Scotland.

IN MERCHANT NAVY

If you wonder what women serving at sea do in their spare time Mrs. Victoria Drummond can tell you—it's embroidery. She appeared in London in the peaked cap and gold-and-purple cuffed jacket of a second engineer of the Merchant Navy. A god-daughter of Queen Victoria, she is the only woman in Britain to hold a Board of Trade certificate as a qualified marine engineer and her medals are the M.B.E. (for gallantry when her ship was bombed) and the Lloyd's War Medal (for bravery at sea). Mrs. Drummond serves on the Atlantic run.

British women have scored a triumph in the cobbling business. L. M. English, who runs one of London's largest shoe-repairing factories, says 85 per cent of his workers are women who started on simple jobs two years ago and are now the equals of skilled men on some of the more intricate cobbling jobs. The women are paid trade board wages according to their age, the basic wage being the same as that for men. There is no age ban. Some girls are 15, some are 50. On some jobs women are even better than men, English reported.

The Royal Navy's only woman surgeon is Surgeon-Lieut. Rewcastle. She is the wife of a solicitor. Lady Furness who recently returned to England from the French Riviera, is trying to find a farm. Says she wants to grow food because she learned the importance of food while living in France since the Germans overran the country.

Hippocrates is said to have liberated medicine from religion.

MRS. A. GIBSON OLIVER and her two-year-old son, Michael, who plan to leave Victoria Saturday for Prince George to join Mr. Oliver, recently transferred from the Victoria West branch of the Royal Bank to the northern interior office. Mrs. Oliver has been spending the last few weeks with her mother, Mrs. C. E. Copeland, at the Copeland summer home, Shawigan Lake. She expects to fly with her son to their new home.

Miss Ella Wiltshire, whose marriage to Mr. Dick Sharp, R.C.N., will take place next month, was the recipient of many useful gifts at a no-nonsense shower given in her honor by a number of her friends Thursday afternoon at an outdoor party. The gifts were concealed in a large basket decorated in yellow and pink. The bride-to-be and her mother, Mrs. E. F. Handicraft Guild On War Project

WINNIPEG—Praise for the wartime enterprise of the 5,000 Ukrainian women represented in the Ukrainian Women's Association of Canada, with headquarters in Saskatoon, was expressed by Dr. John Murray Gibson, general publicity agent for the Canadian Pacific Railway, visiting here today largely in the interests of the Canadian Handicrafts Guild, of which he was recently elected president.

All the energies of these women, who have developed their handicraft culture to a high degree in Canada, is now directed to wartime funds for projects which stretch across Canada. Dr. Gibson, en route east after making the annual excursions with the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies and the sky line hikers of the Rockies, has visited the three western provinces with a view to strengthening the work of the Handicrafts Guild. In the opinion of this authority on cultural Canada, the preservation of handicrafts is an essential part of the country's welfare.

In every province he has made discoveries of fine arts preserved by the peoples from whom they originate. He spoke enthusiastically of Quebec's successful experiment in its School of Domestic Art, the purpose of which is not so much commercial as to prevent the usual exodus from the country to the town by teaching the people to beautify their own homes with their own handiwork. Quebec, said Dr. Gibson, now has a membership of 30,000 in this project, with a dollar membership matched equally by the provincial government for its encouragement.

Miss Vera Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Wood, Trans-ist Road, Oak Bay, who in the recent examinations of the London College of Music, London, England, was awarded the Associate diploma of that institution, with honors. Miss Wood is one of Victoria's well-known young musicians who has given her services generously, both as a member of the Intermediate Musical Art Society and as pianist of the Victoria Girls' Team, playing for many concert parties to entertain the troops.

"I am in Manitoba," he said, "to learn what Manitobans are doing in this respect and what the authorities are doing to foster the arts of the people."

Tag Day to Aid T.B. Veterans

Arrangements have now been completed, with the exception of an appeal for a few more taggers, for the Tuberculous Veterans' tag day, to be held Saturday, and convened by the Ladies' Auxiliary with headquarters in the Sons of England Hall, 1216 Broad Street.

The general public is well acquainted with the work of this association in caring for the chest-disabled veterans from all branches of the service, and also its keen interest in lessening the prevalence of tuberculosis by means of educational propaganda and otherwise. The tag day proceeds will be used to further this work.

Service rendered by the T.V.A. is not confined to those of the last war, but also includes veterans returning from the present conflict suffering from any form of chest condition.

FR. Lt. Patrick Wilson Langford, whose father, Capt. R. W. Langford, was reported to be living in Victoria, is listed as a prisoner of war in the 348 casualty list of the R.C.A.F. issued in Ottawa Thursday.

Memories of nursing school days are being revived for a number of women attending the refresher course now in progress at the Royal Jubilee Hospital and St. Joseph's Hospital. Over 100 former nurses, including many who served overseas during the last war and others who have been inactive through marriage or other reasons, have responded to the appeal to prepare themselves for any emergency which may arise by taking this course in the new techniques and practices of nursing. Above, a class at the Jubilee Nurses' Home listens to a lecture and demonstration of the newest inhalator.

LONDON (CP)—The call-up of older men to the colors has brought a big demand for household pets. The men want them for the wives they've left behind.

War Takes Hoboes Off English Roads

GLASGOW (CP) — If nothing else, the war has taken the tramps off the highways and byways of Britain. Just how many have been called to the forces, or pressed into war industry, no statistics can ever show, but an Anglo-Scots Walking Tours meeting here noted the absence this year of the mobile army of foot which used to haunt the British countryside.

Facts available show that those men who still are wanderers favor the Welsh hills and the warmer south of England. For generation tramps have left their chalk marks on the walls of country houses. A circle and a cross meant "food here"; a ragged line, "beware of the dog." Now a new symbol has been seen — the swastika, with a line through it. The first person to notice this on his gate post was reported to be a mean farmer, famous locally for reporting all unshaven shirkers to the police.

SAVING AS WAR FACTOR

Importance of saving is now an accepted factor in Canada's national economy, and this trend is reflected in figures just released by the Sun Life of Canada. Month of July produced a marked increase in new ordinary assurance (exclusive of group) over the corresponding figure of last year. With an increase of over $40,000,000 for the first six months of 1942, the total business in force of the company now exceeds $3,000,000,000. The increase over the period is 13 per cent greater than the increase for the first six months of 1941. Assets of the Sun Life of Canada are now well over the billion dollar mark, the highest since the company began business over 70 years ago.

Hart Urges Action For P.G.E. Tie-up

Spurred on by Premier John Hart and Congressman Warren G. Magnusson, Vancouver Board of Trade and Seattle Chamber of Commerce are expected to form a joint committee to press Ottawa and Washington for a link through British Columbia to Alaska and the Yukon.

The Premier and Congressman addressed a meeting in Vancouver Thursday of the two organizations, following the return of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce party from a three-day inspection tour of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway.

Mr. Hart, just returned from a conference in Edmonton with U.S. army officials, on a proposed rail route north, said: "I am convinced the southern terminus of that road will be at Prince George."

If that comes about, he said, "it is the duty of the people of British Columbia and of Washington to see that they are tied up to that great development with a connecting link and that link is the P.G.E. I think British Columbia and Washington should get together and unite in trying to connect up the missing link."

"I hope we can all visualize the extraordinary development that is going to take place in that country," the Premier said. "Now is the time for us to act, for eastern interests are watching us, and I think we of British Columbia and Washington should do our utmost to see that all the great development of the north will not pass us by."

The Premier told the meeting the B.C. government feels the P.G.E. "could be operated more advantageously in other hands."

FOR FUTURE

Congressman Magnusson said: "I can say for my government that it feels there should be another supply line to Alaska. We want to work with you in British Columbia. My enthusiasm for the P.G.E. I can assure you, is unbounded. Here is a great opportunity for our two governments to get together and plan for the future."

He pointed out such a rail link as the P.G.E. could provide would prove of more military value than a cruiser or destroyer and would cost much less.

The Seattle delegation—bankers, railroad men and business executives—were greatly impressed with the magnificent scenery of the P.G.E.

"Why, it's astonishing," said Fowler W. Martin, vice-president of Pacific National Bank. "Here is a great country just a few hundred miles from Seattle and most of us never heard of it."

Robert McFarlane, assistant to the president of the Northern Pacific Railroad said: "The railroad is well maintained to meet its requirements. I have greatly enjoyed the spectacular scenery which is to be found along the entire length of the road."

As he looked from the diner at the Fraser roaring far below Mr. McFarlane said he felt sure the scenery was as spectacular as along any road in the world.

Thomas Balmer, vice-president of the Great Northern Railway, Stanley E. Stretton of the Standard Oil and J. J. Underwood, Washington, D.C. manager of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce became so impressed with the country that they left the special train to spend a few days fishing.

WENT FISHING

Mr. Balmer conferred frequently on the trip with his assistant chief engineer, H. J. Seyton, and Mr. McFarlane of Northern Pacific studied maps and P.G.E. reports, leading observers to feel both roads are vitally interested in British Columbia's railway.

Hon. A. Wells Gray, Minister of Lands, made the trip as did W. H. Tobey, P.G.E. general manager, J. A. Quick, the road's superintendent, Chas. L. Bates, chief engineer and H. H. Bailey, master mechanic. Also acting as hosts were Lieut. Louis LeBourdais, M.L.A. for Cariboo and E. C. Carson, M.L.A. for Lillooet.

At Quesnel the Board of Trade entertained members of the group and at Pemberton farmers of the district arranged a display of their produce and loaded the train with fine vegetables and flowers.

On the trip, in addition to those mentioned, were Glenn Carrington, chairman of the Alaska committee of the Seattle Chamber; Arthur N. Brambach, Wallace H. Campbell, Harry V. Carleton, vice-president and general manager of West Construction Company; J. J. Feder-spiel of Union Oil; Earl W. Knight, publisher of the Alaska Weekly; Doug Welch of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer; Emil Sleik; Emil B. Bluckhohn, assistant vice-president of First National Bank of Seattle; Foster

SEES POSSIBILITIES

Before leaving for Seattle the delegation issued the following statement:

"Our delegation was favorably impressed with the possibilities which the P.G.E. affords as a link in the direct rail connection between Vancouver, Seattle and other Pacific Coast cities and Alaska. The railway gave every appearance of being well constructed and maintained. In view of the present emergency it is fortunate that at least an important part of this rail system projected for service to Alaska is available for use. To make it effective it will be necessary to complete the gap between Quesnel and Prince George. Much of this section already has been graded and some rail laid. We were advised by engineers familiar with the route that there are no difficult engineering problems connected with this extension. Authoritative sources also informed us that this gap could be closed, not only in ample time for the completion of the main line to Alaska, but in fact it could be utilized in bringing in supplies for the construction of the Alaska Railroad itself."

MILITARY ADVANTAGE

"It seems logical that a north and south rail connection with the Yukon and Alaska would hold great military advantage."

"It is obvious that the first justification for this project must rest on the present emergency, and the military benefits which will result from this construction. However, in view of the close and long-established business relationships which we have enjoyed with Alaska we cannot overlook its postwar possibility."

"This trip, made at the invitation of Premier John Hart, has given our chamber delegation a much better understanding, not only of the possibilities of the P.G.E., but of the larger plan of a rail connection with the north."

"We are grateful to Premier Hart for the opportunity to view the railway and every consideration was extended to us by P.G.E. officials. The scenery along the railway is wonderful and the other development possibilities in the territory were apparent. We were deeply impressed by the general hospitality of the communities along the line and those who have been in Alaska readily were reminded of the spirit of the north. It was a most enjoyable and informative trip, and from our point of view was genuinely worth while. Several members said they hoped to make the first trip over the line when it is completed to Alaska."

When the machine shop of a technical high school was given a "sub-contract" to produce machine parts for a war plant recently, the results were so highly successful that the program is being expanded.

Royal Family at Home—New Pictures

The King as a business man. His Majesty keeps long office hours and his duties as head of a great empire at war are probably more arduous and exacting than those of any other man in Great Britain.

Charming study of the King and Queen as husband and wife exchanging amused glances as they watch their children being photographed. The Royal Family lives much like any other British family in wartime, and practices economy every bit as strict as any of their subjects.

Keen interest and concentration are written on the faces of the Queen, Princess Margaret Rose and Princess Elizabeth as they watch the King posing for his photograph.

Princess Elizabeth smiles in "big sisterly" manner at Margaret Rose as they discuss a picture in a book.

This delightful "father and daughter" study was made when Princess Margaret Rose visited the King's office and His Majesty took time off to give her a "dialling" lesson.

Most intimate "home picture" of the Royal Family ever made is probably this unstudied group gathered around the fire. Centre of interest is the 16-year-old heir to the throne, Princess Elizabeth, who stands in the centre, busily knitting.

All members of the Royal Family devote themselves to busy programs of war work. Here apparently, Princess Elizabeth has struck a slight snag in her piece of knitting, and the Queen leans over to diagnose the trouble and offer advice.

By PETE SALLAWAY

TWO playing nights have passed on and the senior ball league officials have yet to see a winner. The boys started off by forcing a postponement of the scheduled Navy-Army game Monday night and the V.M.D. and Pitzer and Nex followed with a stalemate Wednesday. Which all makes it lovely for the league attempting to have a champion determined by August 29 for the opening of the B.C. championship series against the winner of the Burrard League in Vancouver.

When they came back in the ninth inning to force a tie with the V.M.D., the Pitzer and Nex crew were just living up to their reputation of being great finishers. The gammen have long been recognized for their ability to come through in the stretch. We doubt if a single fan in the stands would have conceded Manager Bert Nex's club a ghost of a chance when they trotted in for their final stand at the plate in the first of the ninth.

Mound work of Tommy Musgrave and Ronnie Gervais in the playoff opener was certainly not up to expectations. The boys uncorked five wild pitches, three of them being responsible for runs. Musgrave appeared to be trying too hard and, as a result, had little control over both his fast ball and hook. Gervais was throwing his drop ball into the dirt most of the evening and, if the Pitzer and Nex boys had waited for good strikes and refrained from being a bunch of "bad ball" hitters they would have fared a lot better against the southpaw.

All that squawking from the V.M.D. camp about the darkness, after Pitzer and Nex, had tied the game, was tiresome. Had after allowing the game to go into the ninth Umpire Tommy Restell could do nothing else but make the teams play it out. It would have been as much as his life was worth to have called the game and allowed the V.M.D. to leave the park with a win, with the score reverting to the end of the eighth. Umpire Restell just gambled and lost. With the shipyards holding a four-run lead entering the ninth he had no idea the clubs would have to finish the inning, and the game would end in plenty of time. Just goes to show the ump's should not take any chances. Maybe after this they will call the game and save themselves any possible chance of being put on the spot.

We were not surprised when Umpire Restell ruled Babe Work out for stepping out of the batters box in attempting to bunt. The V.M.D. first sacker has been getting away with it all season but his rule breaking was not quite as flagrant as Wednesday evening. Work was three or four strides away from the plate before the ball landed in the catcher's glove.

Untimely death at Prince Rupert of Harry Jones brings to memory the fact that "Jonesey" as he was known to his legion of friends in the sports world of the Pacific Northwest, had an enviable record as an active participant in many lines of sport. And Jones seldom talked about his own achievements. In 1924 Harry won the British Columbia amateur golf championship and was also the winner of the Totem Pole tournament at Jasper during its early promotion. In his early years Jones was prominent in amateur hockey, riding, and English rugby. At the Los Angeles Olympic Games Jones, participated in the yacht racing events as a representative of Canada. Then Jones turned to sport promotion where his infectious good humor made him popular with all his associates. We met up with Harry last winter through his connection with the Coast Hockey League and his death marked the loss of a good friend.

Lloyd Mangrum Tournery Entry

VANCOUVER. (CP) — Par seemed sure of a beating today as nearly 200 contestants lined up for the start of the $2,500 Lions Gate open golf tournament at the Shaughnessy Heights Golf Club. Golfer receipts from the three-day affair go to the benevolent fund of the R.C.A.F.

Public choice as winner of top money is Lloyd Mangrum of Los Angeles, who didn't do anything to dispel this impression. Thursday when he toured the course with a 68, four under par. He played this afternoon with Stan Leonard of Vancouver, Canadian professional champion, and John "Mysterious" Montague of Hollywood.

After 18 holes today and Saturday will be reduced to the low 60, who will play 36 holes Sunday. Top-ranking pros from the Pacific Northwest are expected to vie with Mangrum and Harry Bassler, another California sharpshooter, in pocketing most of the cash at stake.

Charges Tennis Favor

No Western Players

By SCOTT YOUNG
TORONTO (CP) — Why is the Canadian junior tennis team in the Seignior Club's international invitation tournament, Saturday and Sunday, limited to Quebec and Ottawa district players?

That's one of those nice, burning questions which, usually, never are answered. But discrimination is plain in the choice of the "Canadian" team. Five of the juniors chosen are from Montreal, two from Quebec City, two from Ottawa and two from Beauharnois, Que. The entry hardly qualifies the tournament for its tag as "international."

If sponsors of the matches called it the United States vs. Quebec province junior tennis tournament, headline writers would go crazy, but the name would be a fair representation of the competition's nature.

Our boys probably will take a dreadful beating from the visitors, because the United States team really has a national aspect and top American juniors generally are as good as our best seniors. But the degree of defeat could have been lessened considerably by a judicious choice of the best juniors from Canada's nine provinces.

ALL IGNORED
British Columbia, one of Canada's tennis strongholds, certainly should have been represented. The prairies probably have one or two good juniors, and western Ontario has several. All have been ignored.

In comparison, here are the home towns of the American competitors: Seattle, Wash.; Hollywood; Hamtramck, Mich.; San Gabriel, Cal., and Worcester, Mass.

The one possible explanation is financing. Well, I doubt that the Pacific coast residents on the United States team are paying their own way to the tournament.

And four of the Americans are from the far west, one from the middle west. It looks from here like the old trouble — giving more consideration to a visiting attraction than to genuine promotion of the sport within our own borders.

Rally in Ninth Wins for Sidney

Pushing across five runs in the ninth inning on the strength of three hits, including a home run by Primeau, and a couple of costly errors, Sidney defeated the Barons 10 to 8 in the first game of the lower island senior A softball series Thursday night.

Clubs will meet in the second game at Sidney Sunday, and, if a third game is necessary, it will be played Tuesday night.

After Sidney had scored five runs in the first two innings they were held scoreless by Chuck Leason on the mound for the Barons. In the meantime the Barons had built up an 8 to 5 margin by the end of the sixth. The clubs went scoreless in the seventh and eighth, then Sidney came through with their scoring spree in the last inning.

Ray Byers pitched the nine innings for Sidney.

Pro-Amateur Ice Leaders Gather

TORONTO (CP) — A general feeling among hockey followers that a meeting of professional and amateur hockey officials here today will produce an announcement on the game's future finds no support among the officials who will attend the meeting.

Frank Selke, acting general manager of the Toronto Maple Leaf Gardens Ltd., said Thursday on the question of continuance that "we don't expect to hear for some time yet about this."

Selke repeated the statement made last week by Frank Calder, president of the National Hockey League, that the meeting today is strictly a routine affair.

"The relations committee of the N.H.L. will meet with representatives of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association regarding extension of the agreement we made some time ago to pay for amateurs we signed into professional ranks," Selke said.

"Frank Calder, Lester Patrick (New York Rangers) and I are on the relations committee."

Selke said there had been no opposition to the professional-amateur agreement, and that it likely will be extended.

MINOR LOOPS REPRESENTED
Presidents of the American Hockey League and American Association have been invited to attend the meeting. This may indicate that continuance of professional hockey during wartime will be discussed at a session other than the routine N.H.L.-C.A.H.A. conclave.

But it was reported in Ottawa Wednesday night that the brief presented by Calder to Elliott Little, director of National Selective Service, has not yet been answered. Therefore it is likely that any early announcement of professional hockey's future will come from Ottawa.

Wyatt Hurls One-hitter

Brooklyn Dodgers have a little matter with St. Louis Cardinals before they will be ready for the world series, but their ace right-hander, Whitlow Wyatt, is as fully prepared for the October classic today as he can ever hope to be.

Wyatt, who never pitched a no-hit game in his dozen years around the major leagues, came as close as possible without actually achieving it Thursday when he let New York Giants down with one blow as the Dodgers triumphed 2 to 1 in a twilight-arc light game.

The victory, opening an important four-game series, boosted the Dodgers National League lead to seven games over the Cardinals, who were idle.

In the only other National League game, Cincinnati Reds snapped a six-game losing streak and crept up on the third-place Giants by turning back Pittsburgh Pirates 5 to 3.

Johnny Vander Meer pitched six-hit ball for his 14th win and missed a shutout when Vince DiMaggio blasted a three-run homer in the eighth.

SOX WHIP YANKS
Boston Red Sox, refusing to concede the American League flag to New York's front-running defending champs, walloped the Yankees 7 to 4, and rounded out a four-game series with three triumphs.

Jim Tabor, who hit a pair of two-run homers in leading the Sox to victory the previous day, homered with two mates aboard Thursday to climax a six-run outburst in the fifth inning. The Red Sox chopped another full game off the Yankee lead, but they still trail by 10½ lengths.

At the other end of the junior circuit, the Philadelphia Athletics took a doubleheader in their cellar series with the Washington Senators.

A 17-hit attack on three Washington pitchers gave the Athletics the opener, 9 to 2, and sent back Newsom to his 16th defeat as Rus Christopher hurled seven-hit ball for Philadelphia.

The nightcap went 12 innings before the A's triumphed 6 to 1, by routing Walt Masterson with a five-hit uprising that produced five runs with the help of a sacrifice, a walk, a wild pitch and two Washington errors.

Chicago White Sox came from behind with six runs in the fifth inning to stop the St. Louis Browns, 8 to 5, in a night game. Johnny Humphries hurled seven-hit ball for the Sox.

Playoff Ball Game Tonight

Playoff baseball will be the feature again tonight at Athletic Park when the Navy and Army open their semifinal series in the city championship playdowns. Game time is 6.15.

Clubs will battle in the second game of the best of three series Saturday afternoon at 2.30. Saturday night at 6 the V.M.D. and Pitzer & Nex will hook up again in their semifinal playoff. These clubs fought to a 6 to 6 deadlock Wednesday night.

Gerry Whitney, number one hurler in the Army camp, will work for them tonight, while Dumeah or McIntyre will receive the call from the Navy.

Ray Robinson Fights Shank

NEW YORK (AP) — Ruben Shank, a cowhand out of Colorado, who spots decisions over Fritzzy Zieg and Henry Armstrong, makes his bow in Madison Square Garden tonight against unbeaten "Sugar Ray" Robinson, the Harlem skinny man with the punch like a kicking broncho.

They tangle for 10 rounds — or less — and from indications it would do Ruben a lot of good if he could take a lariat into the ring with him, because the sugar man is about 1 to 4 to chalk up the 123rd straight win in his string.

The lure of Robinson's fists, built up through his run of 33 professional and 89 amateur outings without a loss, probably will induce some 10,000 customers to chip in to a gross pot within shouting distance of $25,000.

Naturally, Shank does not agree with the majority opinion. He came east after getting a close decision over Armstrong a couple of months ago in Denver. In his two recent eastern starts — both in Newark — he went to a draw with Vinnie Vines, a fair welterweight, and then flattened Phil Norman. Since then, he's been around town in a 10-gallon hat shouting for a shot at Robinson.

Coast Baseball Hits Stump

Two-games Draw Poorly

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The army-decreed inauguration of twilight baseball in the Coast League brought a light turnout — in more ways than one.

Out went the lights Thursday night in San Francisco's Seals Stadium on the first pitch of the eighth inning. And out went thousands of fans — to other spots than the ball parks — everywhere a league game was played.

Seattle, which beat Portland 8 to 5 and the approach of darkness by an even closer margin at Seattle, had the only hopeful explanation. Only 1,601 fans, many of whom ate cold box suppers, were in the stands in contrast with 3,233 at Wednesday night's game. But club officials pointed out there was a special army relief program at nearby Longacres racetrack.

In San Francisco, where fans vainly have been going to night games this week for a sight of the Seals licking Los Angeles, just that happened, 9 to 4 — but only 1,007 customers saw it. The night before a San Francisco defeat was witnessed by what sports writers called "a slim crowd of 2,500." Lights, required at Thursday's twilight affair after the sixth inning, went off so abruptly in the eighth under dimout requirements that few fans knew what the final score was.

Oaklands Go To Sidelines; Play Saturday

The stage was all set, Thursday night, for Oaks to bow out of 1942 lacrosse competition in an inconspicuous manner, which they did — but not inconspicuously. United Services defeated them for the third consecutive time, on this occasion, 14 to 10, and so gained the right to play Bays-Douglas Tire in the first game of the finals, Saturday night.

After taking a sound drubbing Tuesday night — the score was 27 to 9 — it had been programmed that Oaks take the same ghastly treatment Thursday. In the first half they ran true to prediction. The score at the half was 9 to 1 for Services.

In the second half Oakland staged a revolution they just couldn't quite finish off. A fight and constant stream of offenders to the penalty box seemed to upset the demeanour of the servicemen in the third quarter. They never recovered their equilibrium and in some of the roughest and dirtiest play of the season Oakland outscored them nine goals to five to bring the final tally to quite a decent status.

Score at the end of the first period was 5 to 1 for Services. The game had hardly started when Services' crack wingman, Archie Dixon, was hit in the kidneys by a shot on goal. He went down and was taken off the floor somewhere in the realm of ice cubes. In the second quarter Services held Oaks scoreless and dropped in another four themselves. Their net custodian, Louis Moro, was really hot in that canto and stopped all 10 shots thrown at him by Oaks.

HUGGING MATCH
Came the third quarter. Each team had scored a goal when Freddy Ranson and Tony Worscroft started a necking party just outside the Services goal. It didn't get any further than hugs and kisses, but each got five minutes.

This started some kind of vogue and before the period was over Services had drawn 20 minutes in penalties, Oaks 11. Taking advantage of that nine minutes difference, Bob McIntyre's team, coached by Roy WASHINGTON (AP) — They're planning to bring Lee Savold and Tony Musto out tonight in Washington's most postponed fight of the year.

Promoter Joe Turner optimistically predicted a turnout of 10,000 or more spectators at Griffith Stadium for his thrice-postponed heavyweight scrap.

Savold ruled about a 2 to 1 favorite with the betting fraternity, although he will be giving away about a 10-pound weight advantage to the 202-pound Musto.

Los Angeles has decided to play nothing but day games.

Seattle's business manager, Bill Mulligan, is confident twilight games can draw crowds.

Hollywood, for the present, agrees only on one thing — what Sherman said about war.

At Seattle the Rainiers bunched six bingles in the second inning for four runs and added two additional scores on four safeties in the third. Rainier batters collected 13 hits off four Beaver hurlers while Carl Fischer, the winning pitcher, gave up 10 safeties.

San Diego and Sacramento were idle. They are scheduled to play a twilight game today at the Solons' Park.

Scores follow:
R. H. E.
Los Angeles — 4 12 1
San Francisco — 9 15 1
Batteries — Raffensberger, Malory (6), Dobernic (7), Lynn (7), Davis (7) and Todd; Seats, Eperly (5) and Ogdrowski.

Portland — 5 10 2
Seattle — 8 13 3
Batteries — Osborne, Schubel (2), Fitzke (3), Stine (9) and Leovich; Fischer and Kearse.

Oakland — 7 13 0
Hollywood — 1 5 5
Batteries — Salvesson and Raimond; Thomas, Bevans (8) and Brenzel, Atwood (8).

Woolsey for this game, narrowed the score down to 14 to 8.

In the last period Oaks must have decided they had some chance so went to work with zest. They carried most of the play but found goalie Moro filled more of the goal than they expected, so were able to score only twice. However, they held Services scoreless. With four seconds to go, Kenny Featherstone and Johnny Penketh, 42nd cousins, thought to detain the crowd a little longer with a family tiff. Featherstone's side won, but it took the two refs and half a dozen players to convince Johnny. He was still rarin' to go after being pulled out from underneath Featherstone.

MOBO SPECTACULAR
In the first half it was the Services' team, playing the lacrosse of last game, that beat Oaks. In the second half it was the spectacular net minding of Louis Moro, late of Trail, that won the show. Louis was really in there when disorganization crept into his team. Altogether he stopped 31 shots. Bill Andrews, in the Oakland nets, had an off night. He stopped 26. Most of the shots that beat him, however, would have beaten any goalie.

Scoring was evenly distributed. With two goals each, Art Chapman, Ralph Temple, Jack Williams, Bobby Phelan and George Ughart led the servicemen. Alan Rhodes and Freddy Ranson, with two each, led Oaks.

The preliminary saw Owl Drug defeat Young Jokers, 13 to 10, in the first playoff game for the city Juvenile A championship. The drugstore lads seemed a bit better organized and received grand backing from a very warm Reg. Clarkson on goal.

Brown and Turner refereed.

Assignment of seven teachers appointed to city grade school staffs this year was announced by H. L. Campbell, municipal inspector, today.

All teachers were appointed earlier this summer, but had

OBJECTOR JAILED FOR SECOND TERM

Allan Everett Beckett, conscientious objector who had previously served three months for failing to register for alternative service, was sentenced to another six months in Oakalla Jail by Magistrate A. M. Wastell at Alert Bay, according to information received by provincial police here today.

Accused refused to plead to the charge of failing to report to the National War Services registrar and a plea of not guilty was entered for him. He admitted the authenticity of documents produced and said he had previously been sentenced on a similar charge.

Supplementals Start Monday

Supplemental examinations for those students who failed to secure required grades in certain subjects in university entrance and senior matriculation examinations will start Monday at Victoria College.

They will precede the Victoria College supplementals, which are scheduled from Sept. 8 to 15.

Monday morning candidates will be given an opportunity to secure credits in English, social studies and world and economic history. The tests for university entrance and senior matriculation students will continue until the following Friday, with examinations each morning and afternoon, starting at 9 and 1 respectively.

TOWN TOPICS

S. F. Davies, Wellington Court, Vancouver, reported to police Thursday evening that $30 in personal belongings had been stolen from his car while parked outside the Glenahiel Hotel, Aug. 18.

The Pacific Coast Plumbing Inspectors' Association in a letter to the Mayor and City Council today asked the city to send J. A. Birnie to the association convention to be held in Stockton, Cal., Oct. 8-10.

Three motorists were fined $15 each for speeding when they appeared in police court today. Two were fined $5, one for making no hand signal and the other for failing to heed a traffic light. Six motorists were fined $2.50 each for overparking.

John Baboo, an East Indian, was fined $50 and had his driver's license suspended for three months when convicted in police court today of dangerous driving on Wharf Street, June 18. The charge arose from an accident, when Baboo's wood truck smashed into the rear of a car owned by Edward Moir. Moir was in the hospital for six weeks as a result of the accident.

More Credit Due Ground Men

OTTAWA (CP)—Ground men in the air force never get enough credit, Wing Cmdr. Fauquier, D.F.C., one of Canada's aces of the present war, said in an interview here today.

Back for a brief spell of leave after 32 bombing expeditions over enemy territory, Fauquier said one of the biggest thrills in war flying comes from letting go the big 4,000-pound "block-buster" bombs at an enemy target.

He commanded a squadron of Halifax bombers in England until 10 days ago, but declined to discuss any of his personal experiences in detail—most emphatically not the raids on Bremen, Essen, Hamburg and other centres which led to his award of the D.F.C.

"I don't know what it was all about," he said. "Ground crews are equally responsible with aircrews for Allied bombing successes. The ground men never get enough credit."

Wing Cmdr. Fauquier flew the Atlantic Tuesday night and surprised his wife and two-year-old daughter, who are summering at a camp in the Gattineau district. At the end of the week he and Mrs. Fauquier expect to go to Jasper, Alta., to visit his mother, Mrs. G. E. Fauquier and the wing commander's five-year-old son, who is spending the summer there.

Roosevelt Predicts 'Fearful Retribution'

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Roosevelt warned enemy nations in a formal statement today of "fearful retribution" to come for what he called their "barbaric crimes" against civilian populations in Axis-occupied countries.

The President issued his warning after Secretary of State Cordell Hull had given him a communication from the Netherlands ambassador and the Yugoslav and Luxembourg ministers calling attention to Nazi slaying of hostages.

Describing these as acts of desperate men, and promising that they would result in fearful retribution, the President said the government of the United States had been receiving information of Axis atrocities from numerous sources and would welcome more.

When the United Nations achieve victory, he asserted, it is their purpose to make appropriate use of the amassed evidence.

The time will come, Mr. Roosevelt said, when the guilty persons will have to stand up in courts of law in countries they now are oppressing and answer for their acts.

Asked at his press conference whether he could commit the people of ravaged countries to acting through courts of law once "they got a chance" at the oppressors, the President admitted probably he could not do so, but said he was expressing a hope that judicial processes would prevail.

Faces Defence Charge

VANCOUVER (CP)—Mrs. Kay Davis, 19, of Vancouver, was remanded until Aug. 26 for hearing when she appeared today before Magistrate H. S. Wood charged with having a sketch of "a fortified place" in her possession, "in a manner likely to be prejudicial to the safety of the state." Bail was set at $1,000, and no plea was taken.

Milk Price Unchanged

Official retail price of standard milk in Victoria is unchanged by the order issued today by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Ottawa, announcing a subsidy of approximately 2½ cents a gallon to milk producers and fixing the price paid by distributors to producers. Although many consumers in Victoria are paying less, the maximum price for standard milk in this district is 13 cents a quart and the board's order rules that the minimum price to the producer here shall be $2.60 per 100 pounds. (There are approximately 10 pounds to a gallon.)

John Gibb, an official of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board in Vancouver, has been in Victoria for three days investigating the milk situation on this island and has met with a demand from milk producers for a price of $2.70 per 100 pounds. With issuance of today's order his task is concluded except for establishing a price which distributors may charge wholesale customers, including restaurants, hospitals, army establishments and others who buy milk from them in bulk.

MILK BOARD

The board's order, Mr. Gibb says, specifies that provincial authorities shall have charge of distribution of the subsidy to producers and an additional task for him will be to see B.C. government authorities on this point. Other provinces in Canada have milk boards already in existence who will carry this out. It will be an innovation here.

In comparison with the new producer price of $2.60 per 100 pounds, distributors have been paying producers in this district prices ranging from $2.10 to $2.40.

Ask Glider Field For Victoria

The possibility of securing for Victoria a glider training field came up for discussion when the City Council business, trade and re-establishment committee met this afternoon.

Alderman B. J. Gadsden, chairman of the committee, said this morning he had been looking into the plan for some time and he felt a number of young persons would be interested. He said the training plan might be tied in with the training of pilots for the air force.

"I understand some of the finest German pilots were trained in gliders," Alderman Gadsden said. "I think we've got some good opportunities for glider training here."

Reporter Wounded

MONTREAL (CP)—Montreal Standard has received a cable from Wallace Reyburn, Standard correspondent who landed with Canadian forces in Wednesday's raid on Dieppe, stating that he has arrived in London wounded by shrapnel during the operations, and wearing only underwear, boots and a navy blanket. His injuries are not serious. He went into the action with the South Saskatchewan Regiment, was the 10th person in an assault party that swarmed up the shore, and spent six and a half hours ashore, the longest time of any of the three newspapermen who landed.

Canadian Fusiliers Join Garrison Here

Many of them taking their first look at the ocean, men of the Canadian Fusiliers whose home is London, Ont., arrived in Victoria Thursday and today were settling down in their quarters somewhere in the Victoria and Esquimalt garrison.

Carrying their kitbags and fully accoutred the long line of troops attracted considerable attention when they marched through the city from the C.P.R. dock Thursday afternoon.

The city building inspector Thursday issued a permit for the construction of a five-room, $3,500 house at 845 Richmond Avenue.

Wood Control Proving Costly

Confusion, inefficiency and waste in the administration of wood control is costing citizens of Victoria $200,000 a year, Alderman W. Lloyd Morgan, one-man City Council committee for fuels, said in a statement today.

"Our wood-supply is now administered by an official from Ottawa who apparently knows little about our local fuels or their use and distribution," he said.

"Our citizens would do well to take notice of the regulations, orders, and counter orders, policies and counter policies, shifts and changes and innovations which we must now accept. Such confusion, inefficiency and waste is now costing the citizens of Victoria approximately $200,000 more per year for wood fuel than in the year preceding the war. This cost is largely due to price ceilings fixed at levels, some of which are in excess of prices charged by dealers at the time the control of wood fuel prices was instituted and the policy of remote control instituted."

Students to Buy, Sell School Books

In line with other wartime salvage, and as a convenience to parents who may wish to purchase or otherwise locate second-hand books, student committees in all Victoria schools will offer for sale or exchange, school books which will be needed after school opens, Sept. 1.

Children who have good used books, may bring them to the school, where they will be offered for sale or exchange at half-price, or at a price set by the parents, H. L. Campbell, municipal school inspector, said today. If the books are not sold within a week or so the pupil may take them home.

Parents who wish to purchase second-hand books may visit the schools any afternoon during the first week to see if any are available.

Trustees to Discuss Single Board Plan

Plans of the creation of a single school administration unit for Greater Victoria will be discussed at a meeting to be held at the City Hall council chambers at 8 next Thursday evening.

The meeting was called at the request of the Saanich School Board. City school trustees have consented to attend. Invitations have also been extended to the Oak Bay and Esquimalt school boards.

It is felt by some trustees that certain problems of school administration and the location of schools which have been caused by the growth of population and accentuated by war conditions could be worked out more satisfactorily and cheaper by a single rather than four administrative units for Greater Victoria schools.

'Mrs. Miniver' at Capitol Monday

Reproducing a charming little village in England, and wrecking it with bombs, was the technical feat achieved by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in the making of "Mrs. Miniver," which, teaming Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon, tells the story of the courage and fortitude of English families under war conditions of today. The picture comes Monday to the Capitol Theatre.

"Mrs. Miniver" is a dramatic story of a typical English family. The son enlists, after a romance with the village belle. The older men turn out in flimsy boats to aid in the rescue at Dunkerque. There are moments in bomb shelters. In the dramatic climax the village is attacked. Throughout the thrills run poignant human interest episodes as well as comedy moments.

LINDEN TRAVERS
IN FORMBY FILM

Formby's new leading lady in "South American George," now at the Dominion Theatre, is charming Linden Travers, for whose sake our hero bravely endures all the torments and complications. Miss Travers' delightful performance is only equalled by Enid Stamp-Taylor's grand portrayal of an elusive prima donna. There is plenty of first-rate work from an all-comedy cast that includes Jacques Brown, Felix Aylmer, Ronald Shiner, Alf Goddard, Gus MacNaughton, Mavis Villiers, Herbert Lomas, Beatrice Varley, and other favorites.

YORK THEATRE

When British cameramen came to Canada to film the war picture which has become the record-breaker of all time since its release in England, they also created something that was never used in film-making before—a seakink overcoat for a camera.

One episode of the picture "49th Parallel," at the York Theatre, now released in Canada by Columbia, was laid in Cape Wollstenholme, a rock-bound, ice-clad promontory at the entrance to Hudson Bay. To get there, the company chartered the motorship "Continental" and were gone nearly two months on the voyage. They did not realize just how silent it was, however, in the Arctic and thereby caused themselves some hard work.

ATLAS THEATRE

What the nation thinks about a star can best be gauged by the amount of fan mail he or she receives. Take Rita Hayworth's case, for instance.

A short while ago, a small package of letters bound by a rubber band would come in each week. Then came two packages, then four or five until she began to hit the mail sack class. During shooting of "My Gal Sal" her latest starrer for 20th Century-Fox, which is currently at the Atlas Theatre, one week saw the grand total of two full mail sacks.

RIO THEATRE

The "East Side Kids," those holy terrors of the screen, have the starring roles in Monogram's "Bowery Blitzkrieg," now at the Rio Theatre. Featured in the picture are Leo Gorcey, Bobby Jordan, Huntz Hall, Warren Hull and Charlotte Henry.

This marks the first time in the "East Side Kids" series that Huntz Hall has been featured with the group. He, along with Gorcey and Jordan, was a member of the original band of rowdies that appeared in "Dead End," both on the stage and in pictures.

OAK BAY THEATRE

The story of one man's mistakes and his efforts to recover his place in the business world and regain the confidence of his family and friends is told in "It Happened to One Man," starring the international stars, Wilfrid Lawson and Nora Swinburne, now showing at the Oak Bay Theatre.

Notable in its disclosure of the methods employed by crooked financiers to defraud gullible members of the public, the film is made particularly noteworthy by the appearance of such talented performers as Marta Labarr, Ivan Brandt, Reginald Tate, Brian Hunt, Patricia Roc and Athole Stewart in prominent supporting roles.

CADET THEATRE

Marie Ault and Donald Calthrop, two of the supporting players in Gabriel Pascal's "Major Barbara," the Bernard Shaw comedy now at the Cadet Theatre, had to wear realistic rags for their roles and almost went hungry as a result. When they walked into a local hotel, while on location, and asked for a table, they were flatly refused. The waiters blushed, suspecting that they were staging an unemployment demonstration. Fortunately, some well-dressed members of the cast arrived and vouched for them in the nick of time.

Dorothy Dix:

Young Men and Girls Told To Avoid Long Engagement

In these war times, when so many of the boys who are going to the front are asking girls to wait for them, the question of the long engagement becomes paramount to both men and women. Much, of course, is to be said on both sides of the subject.

There is the sentimental angle that makes the girl feel she will be bound closer to the boy and more sure of him if she is fettered to him by an engagement ring; even if the engagement never ends in marriage she will have had her little bit of romance to remember as long as she lives. And for the boy it answers the eternal masculine demand for some woman who belongs to him, who will be watching and waiting and praying for his return, and who will make all the hardships and dangers he has to undergo worthwhile because he will feel that he is fighting for her.

And there is the realistic angle that makes them both know that at their time of life they are in a state of flux, when their emotions and their tastes are unstable, and that they are making vows they may not be able to keep. They know that the war will change them both and that when they meet again they may not even want each other. So the more prudent of them wonder just how wise it is to gamble on a future that is so uncertain.

Now, being a sentimentalist myself, I hate to disturb love's young dreams by warning youths and maidens who are thinking of entering into a long engagement that it is one of the most dangerous and generally disastrous experiences which a human being can undertake. It calls for a patience, a perseverance, a lack of imagination, a staidness and a general adhesiveness that few of us possess. Love loses its freshness if kept too long waiting. The wedding food should be eaten while it is still hot. Otherwise it is as flat and tasteless as any other meal that has been too long cooking.

A long engagement is a hazardous venture, whether a couple are separated or whether they live on the same street. If they are parted, it is almost inevitable that they should grow away from each other and lose interest in each other, and that when they come together again they are disappointed and disillusioned. They have had different experiences, been in a different environment, known different people, and they meet as strangers who have nothing to say to each other and who bore each other because they no longer have anything in common. They are not even fair in their judgment of each other because each has built up, in separation, an ideal Prince Charming or glamorous girl who really never existed.

On the other hand, if the engaged couple see each other continually, week after week and year after year, they wear off the bloom of romance because romance is an airy-fairy thing made of dreams that will not endure being hacked about.

Also an engaged couple stand to each other in an anomalous position that gets on the nerves of both. They are neither bond nor free. They cannot even define to themselves what are their duties and obligations to each other and so they face a condition that is peculiarly full of jealousies and misunderstandings and bickerings.

Furthermore, we naturally get tired of waiting for a thing too long, no matter how much we want it at first; so love and romance peter out. And when the long-engaged couple finally do get married it is only too often just because they have become a habit to each other and because everybody expected it of them, rather than because they desire it themselves.

Many a man stumbles to the altar on cold feet because when he left home to seek his fortune he asked some girl to wait for him and after, as the phrase goes, "she had given him the best years of her life" keeping her promise to him, he felt in honor bound to marry her, and knew that all their friends and acquaintances would consider him a heel if he didn't. And many a woman marries a man she has been engaged to so long that she has lost her taste for him just because he is her only salvation from being an old maid, and the things in her hope chest are getting yellow with age. But there is no happiness in such marriages.

So I would say to all youngsters who are debating the long engagement problem: Don't. Wait until you are ready to marry. Then choose your mate.

Wars of Napoleon Slow by Modern Standards

In speaking of the present war, people often say that it is "motorized." Some idea of what that means may be gained by thinking of the changes since the time of Napoleon.

Napoleon Bonaparte was the "conqueror" of his time. During a period of 21 years, he led French armies which attacked other countries in Europe. Italy, Austria, Spain and parts of Germany fell under his power. He even drove into northern Africa, and for a time held control of Egypt.

There were cannon in Napoleon's day, and he knew how to use them with great effect. Soldiers were armed with muskets, and thousands of men were in the cavalry.

Yet it was slow warfare by modern standards. No motor cars and no airplanes were used. Napoleon was a skilful leader in war, but at times he made mistakes. Perhaps his greatest mistake was to attack Russia. In 1812 he drove into that country with close to 600,000 men. People of those days thought his army was of vast size.

Although Napoleon swept eastward to Moscow, and captured the city, he later retreated and lost most of his army. Some French soldiers were left to guard Poland and the Baltic states, but hardly 25,000 marched back to Paris with their general. About three-fourths of the men had died from hunger, freezing, disease or Russian bullets.

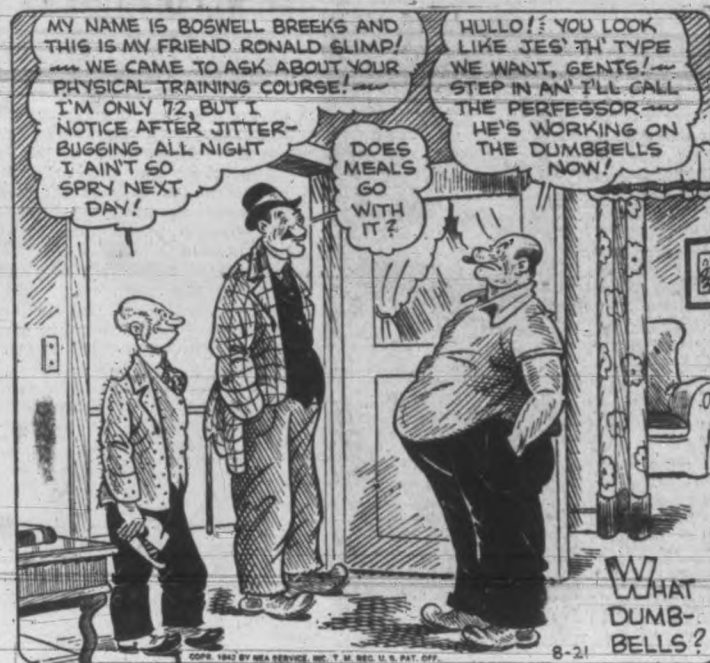

What a different story it would have been if Napoleon's army had been motorized! Even if he had been forced to retreat, he could have saved most of his men if they had moved aboard trucks and jeeps.

Trucks and other motor cars were employed in the first World War, but not the "jeep." This little car is an American product of recent times and has caught the fancy of the public. Jeeps are automobiles made for "rough going." They already have appeared in several battle areas, and in coming months are expected to play a very important part in troop transport.

Tanks are among the other machines in the motorized side of modern warfare. They were used in the latter part of the first World War. Some tanks of today can run from 15 to 20 times as fast as those first used on the battlefield, which could travel only three or four miles per hour. Later models in the first World War could go somewhat faster, but the best of them made only a fraction of the speed of the modern tank.

'A TINY STICK OF GOLD'

This poem was received by the B.C. Overseas Tobacco Fund from a B.C. soldier in Britain, who has been receiving smokes through the fund during the last year.

Though just leaves of soothing fragrance, In a pipe smoothly rolled, To a Soldier, Sailor, Airman, 'Tis a Tiny Stick of Gold.

For when he's sad and lonely, Or weary, wet and cold, He finds new inspiration, In this Tiny Stick of Gold.

When his nerves are taut and rigid, From those lonely hours on guard, It only takes this tiny stick, The tension is relaxed.

When he's feeling blue and homesick, And despondency is rife, It only takes a Stick of Gold To ease his mental strife.

When the letters of his loved one, Gift him to reach their goal, That "stick of consolation" Will soothe his aching soul.

When his day of toil is over, You will find him on his cot, And there to him this tiny stick Does always hit the spot.

Though just a paper cylinder Packed with golden leaf, To a Soldier's every trouble 'Tis the balm of true relief.

To watch the glowing ember, And the smoke rise in the air, E'er brings to him new courage And drives away despair.

In times of peace 'twas habit, A cigarette to hold, But under strain of warfare, They're truly sticks of gold.

Just sticks of golden value, For a Soldier hard to get, To him a precious jewel, Though his but a cigarette.

JOHN MANVILLE

"Sherlock" Would Be Right at Home Here

The classic caricature of Sherlock Holmes as an inquisitive fellow peering through a magnifying glass always reminds your J-M reporter of a certain department of the Johns-Manville factory at Asbestos, P.Q. Dropping in there any day, you're likely to find several men hunched over their benches, eyes glued to the lenses of high-powered microscopes — or dabbling purposefully with some other kind of scientific gadget. It's their job, as members of J-M's Inspection and Control Department, to keep Johns-Manville products on the "straight-and-narrow" path of one single, undeviating standard — to see that these products live up to the high quality for which they are famous.

Originated in peacetime, the chief function now of Johns-Manville Inspection and Control Department is to see that the more than a thousand J-M products used in the war program measure up to the right specifications of our government and armed forces.

Col. Merritt Dieppe Hero

The young Vancouver colonel whose bravery "was the talk of every man who saw him in action" at the Dieppe raid, is identified here as Col. Cecil Merritt, former star for the Vancouver Athletic Club in Western Canada football and a graduate of University School at Mount Tolmie. He matriculated there in 1923.

Col. Merritt is in command of the South Saskatchewan Regiment which successfully took its objective at Pourville, part of the commando attack.

He was born in Vancouver and after attending schools there and University School, later graduated from Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont.

He returned to Vancouver, where he played four seasons with V.A.C., including their unsuccessful trip to Calgary, where they were defeated by the Broncos in the western semifinals in 1931.

He practiced law in civil life but from the time of his R.M.C. graduation he was a member of the Seaforth Highlanders Battalion (Reserve) here.

On the outbreak of war he volunteered for active service and went overseas with the first Canadian contingent.

He took a course at the Camberley Staff College in England and was on the staff of the second division before taking over command of the South Saskatchewan Regiment.

Col. Merritt has a brother and sister serving overseas. Lieut. Bill Merritt with the Seaforth Battalion and Mrs. Jack MacMillan with the Canadian mechanized transport. His father, Capt. Cecil Merritt, was killed while serving with the Seaforths at Ypres in the first Great War.

A.R.P. ACTIVITIES

Owing to action of the Saanich school board, the meeting of Saanich district No. 5 A.R.P. will not be held at the Cloverdale School but will be conducted at the Lake Hill community hall at 8 Friday.

LONDON (CP) — The Gold Coast Administrative Service is to be opened to Africans who will be appointed to cadetships, the Colonial Office announced.

Meets Air Minister

Sgt. Pilot Ernie Scroggs, whose wife lives at 2123 Chambers Street, last Sunday met Air Minister Hon. C. G. Power at a Beaufighter night-fighter squadron base "somewhere in England."

Sgt. Pilot Scroggs has been serving overseas with the R.C.A.F. since December, 1941. He writes his wife that he recently received a bundle of 14 Victoria Daily Times and they were "as welcome as the flowers in spring."

A flier of the first Great War, he has had wide experience in

2 Air Officers Serve Here Now

For the first time in the history of the R.C.A.F. two officers of air rank are active on the Pacific coast. The precedent-making situation is brought about by promotion of Group Capt. K. M. Guthrie to the rank of air commodore as Air Officer in Charge of Administration, Western Air Command.

Air Commodore Guthrie has been senior administrative officer of the command since last March.

A flier of the first Great War, he has had wide experience in the R.C.A.F. since 1920 serving as Senior Air Staff Officer, Eastern Air Command, immediately prior to coming to Victoria.

Air Commodore Guthrie was born in Guelph, Ont., and went to school in Montreal and Ottawa. An air-minded youth, in 1917 he joined the R.F.C. as a pilot, and served overseas until 1919. Returning to Canada he joined the R.C.A.M.C., with which he served until his appointment to the newly-organized air board in the latter part of 1920.

Air Commodore Guthrie's wife is the former Kathleen Fidler of Hamilton, Ont. They have a daughter, Miss Ann Elizabeth.

The guests expressed their appreciation of the help and co-operation of the people of Victoria.

"It has been an amazing and interesting experience to see a great film produced," said Maj. Sivertz. "Miracles have been worked by the company. . . . Stacey's is now a typical Norwegian village, and the Willows is the scene of many wonderful settings."

Following the introduction and brief remarks of the guests, Miss Brown presented vocal solos. Born in Vancouver, the singer, now of Hollywood, is in Victoria on holiday. Accompanied by Mrs. G. A. McCurdy of Nova Scotia, Miss Brown included "Alice Blue Gown," "The Dancing Doll," and "One Fine Day" in her selections.

Board May Check On Canning Sugar

Although no check-up has been made here yet, it is believed Victoria housewives, as in cities across Canada, will be asked to show to Wartime Prices and Trade Board inspectors what use they made of special sugar allowances for fruit preserving.

In other cities, including Vancouver, a questionnaire from the ration division of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board in Ottawa notes the housewife has purchased a stated amount of sugar for canning purposes, the store where she purchased it, and the date of the purchase.

It requests the housewives to name a time at which it will be convenient for an inspector of the ration division to call to see their preserves.

"There is no doubt that some women have been chiseling sugar for purposes other than canning," a spokesman of the price board said.

Housewives, under the ration regulations, have been allowed half a pound of sugar for each pound of fruit canned and three-quarters of a pound for each pound to be made into jam.

The check-up may also cause embarrassment to Victoria storekeepers.

CHECK STORES, TOO

Several storekeepers in other cities were found to have listed their sales of sugar for canning purposes at higher than the actual amounts sold, in order to obtain larger stocks under the replacement provision.

Staffs of the price board in Ottawa have carefully scrutinized purchase vouchers and questionnaires have been mailed to purchasers listing either very large or very small purchases.

"If a woman states she bought half a pound of sugar, for example, we investigate, as it doesn't stand to reason she intends to can only a quarter of a pound of fruit," the board spokesman said.
